FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The Rebels Still on the Line of the River.

Probable Injuries to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Lee's Headquarters at Falling Waters.

The National Forces Being Prepared for Active Operations.

No Forward Movement Yet Attempted.

LATEST REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Sept. 25.

It is evident that the rebels have not left the line of the Upper Potomac, but are injuriously operating on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, between Harper's Ferry and Cumberland. They recently, it is believed, destroyed some of the important bridges West of Martinsburgh, including that over Black River.

THE REBEL LOSSES AT ANTIETAM.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Sept. 25.

Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND, who has been at Frederick and the battle-field since Sunday, arrived here last night. He furnishes some interesting particulars concerning affairs at the scene of the recent conflict.

The loss of the rebels in the late battle far exceeded ours. Up to Sunday night, three thousand dead rebels had been buried by our men, and the rebels themselves buried a large number previous to retreating into Virginia. Between six and seven hundred rebels yet remain unburied, and the stench is intolerable.

The rebels left about five thousand of their wounded within our lines, for whom they begged medical attention, removing all who were wounded in the upper extremeties, and leaving on the field only those who were wounded in the lower limbs.

The total loss of the rebels cannot be much less than five thousand killed and fifteen thousand wounded. Our loss will probably be about twelve hundred killed, six thousand wounded, and eight hundred missing.

Gen. WILLIAMS, of Gen. MCCLELLAN'S staff, informs Dr. HAMMOND that we have captured in the battles in Maryland thirty-five stands of colors, sixteen cannon, and between thirty-five and forty thousand stand of arms. The whole distance travelled by the retreating army, between the battle-field and the Potomac, was strewn with arms. Several thousand stand of arms still remain on the field, uncollected for want of time.

LATEST REPORTS FROM BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 25.

The American, of this morning, says:

"Gen. MCCLELLAN is actively engaged in arranging his forces to counteract the movements of the enemy on the opposite side of the river, where they are understood to be massed.

We have intelligence of matters in progress that it would not be proper to make public at present. A precipitate crossing of the river in the face of so strong a force could not but prove disastrous, and we know that no serious attempt at crossing has yet been attempted.

A gentleman who came from headquarters yesterday, informed us that the troops are in the highest spirits, and that their confidence in Gen. MCCLELLAN, and his ability to lead them to renewed triumphs is unabated.

LATEST REPORTS FROM HARRISBURGH.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Thursday, Sept. 25.

Gov. CURTIN reached Harrisburgh to-day and proceeded directly to Washington, where another meeting of the loyal Governors will be held.

Transportation for over ten thousand of the Pennsylvania Militia returning home, has already been furnished. Fifteen regiments arrive daily and are immediately transported over the different railroads to their several places of destination.

There has been no official information from the army. Civilians arrive by every train from Harper's Ferry and Williamsport. They all confirm the news that no forward movement has yet been made by our forces. The rebels can be distinctly seen on the opposite side of the river at Williamsport and at Falling Waters. Gen. LEE's headquarters are at the latter place.

A large number of the sick and wounded brought here have been removed to Reading.

OUR ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

On the Track of the Army—Appearance of the Country—The Scene of the Middletown Battle—How the Rebels Receive Their Friends.

BOONSBORO, Md., Saturday Night, Sept. 20, 1862.

I have been traveling in the track of the army to-day, and came to-night, here at Boonsboro, within sound of our guns,—a few of which I heard firing briskly just after sundown in the direction of the Potomac, which the advanced guard of our army is reported to have crossed to-day, in pursuit of the fleeing rebel army.

The cars on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad brought me as far as Monocacy, where a gang of laborers were at work, supplying the place of the bridge across the river, destroyed by the rebels. The temporary affair which takes the place of the former fine structure, is to be ready in a day or two.

In addition to officers and soldiers journeying toward the army, the train bore a number of civilians, coming this way from motives of curiosity, or, more legitimately, to minister to the wants of wounded friends. Among them I noticed the petit figure of the genial "Autocrat of the Breakfast-table"—OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. Col. VINTON, of the Forty-third New-York, was also on the cars, on his way to his regiment from a visit to New-York, during which he has succeeded in recruiting it up to the full standard, adding 500 new men.

Frederick is crowded with wounded soldiers coming from the army, and convalescents and new recruits hastening to join their regiments in the advance. For miles along the turnpike, and, indeed, more or less, all the way to here, the two streams were sweeping past each other, by the side of the army wagons that crowded the road, giving token of the presence of the army in this neighborhood. The wounded soldiers met were those whose slight wounds enabled them to take care of themselves. Those more severely injured filled the hospitals along the way, extemporized from farms, churches, and such dwellings as could be made available. There were few signs of devastation to mark the passage of the two armies. Most of what I saw I am sorry to say was laid, whether justly or not I can't say, to the charge of our own army, whose straggling soldiers had made free in some places with the rail fences, or carried off the cabbages and fruit from the farmers' fields and gardens. We need a strong cavalry force to be sent in the rear of our army to force stragglers into the ranks.

But the damage suffered by the inhabitants from our troops, has not been sufficient to abate their enthusiasm at their appearance, and they have received a reception very different from that which awaited the rebel army. Even the Secessionists in this town, I am told, turned their backs upon them, while setting buckets of cold water before their doors to refresh our weary soldiers, besides showing them other attentions. It has really been very hard on the rebels entering into this State, to find the doors shut in their faces by their friends, and then to be so unceremoniously kicked across the Potomac, as they have been by MCCLELLAN. In Baltimore, I heard that the Secessionists of that city, in their secret conclaves went so far as to appoint a committee to visit Frederick, and request Gen. LEE not to come near Baltimore, as it would cause the destruction of the city. The rebels of that town make a good deal of noise, but they are evidently not "spoiling for a fight." The adventurous element among the Secessionists there has been withdrawn by its exodus across the border to the Southern army. Those who remain are chiefly the conservative class of ancient citizens and property holders, who are never fond of tumults, except at a distance. It is rather a good thing, on the whole, to be a rebel in Baltimore. All the "first people" are, it does you no special harm with the Government, and if the rebels succeed, you are able to say I told you so, and to stand well with the new régime, when no favor will be shown to the Yankees.

This country is an agreeable change for our soldiers from the swamps of the Chickahominy. The hills roll up gloriously between here and Frederick, and from the ridge near Middletown, which was so sharply contested by the rebels, we had a most magnificent view of the valleys behind and beyond us, where the bright green of the foliage was brought out in beautiful contrast to the prismatic coloring of the sky, when the horizon was illuminated by rays of the setting sun. PIERREPONT.

Affairs at Hagerstown—The Excitement Regarding the Crossing of the Rebels at Williamsport—The Advance of the Pennsylvanians into Maryland—The Rebels Driven Back by Them, &c.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., SIX MILES FROM THE POTOMAC, Monday, Sept. 22, 1862.

This section of the country still continues to be the theatre of active operations. Two weeks ago I journeyed this way and found the people alarmed, and laboring under the most intense excitement. Then it was a myth which disturbed the quiet and tranquillity of these country villages. Now it is a reality. Yet the excitement of to-day is more than the occasion calls for. In the various towns on the road between here and Harrisburgh I found groups of men collected at the street corners or railway stations canvassing the probabilities of the rebels passing through the Cumberland Valley, their chances of escape, and some even fancying they heard the booming of JACKSON'S guns. Much of this panic is due to the veil of mystery which official authorities throw over the movements of our own as well as the enemy's forces. One citizen enters the telegraph office to inform an absent friend of his whereabouts, and is told that dispatches of no kind can be forwarded, straightway the town is all agog, fancying the enemy have penetrated the lines and cut the wires, and become prey to fearful forebodings. Another steps on board the regular train to learn that it is not going, and in less than ten minutes street rumor has it that the rebs are in possession of the other end of the road.

The Government now have control of the Cumberland Valley Railroad. At Chambersburgh, Friday evening, soon after the passengers had ensconced themselves safely away in their seats, the conductor came on board and informed us that "I have been ordered to have all citizens get off, and, furthermore, it is not safe to go on." People, of course, don't enjoy courting danger, and a skedaddle followed. The train had proceeded but a short distance before it again backed down to the depot, and the further order was promulgated that "all army men, save officers and surgeons, must get off." Your correspondent being an "army man," was permitted, through the kindness of Gen. HOKE, to proceed.

I found at this place that the real cause of danger was a body of the enemy who had crossed the Potomac at Williamsport, and were encamped only about three miles from here. This has undoubtedly been a feint on the part of the enemy to divert attention, while their main forces about Sharpsburgh escaped over the river under cover of a flag of truce. The force consisted of only a few thousand infantry, three hundred cavalry, and several guns. To head off this supposed movement, or any other which the enemy might make, leading toward the Keystone State, Pennsylvanians have rushed to arms en masse. Only a week ago Thursday, Gov. CURTIN issued his proclamation, and now tens of thousands of militia cover the hills in this vicinity and Chambersburgh. It is indeed an outpouring of the professional men, mechanics, and yeomanry. Clothed in every variety and hue of uniform, they come bearing the implements of war, one with the trusty rifle, another with the light carbine, which he slings loosely over his shoulder, and a third with the long-ranged musket—all swearing death to the rebels. Among other prominent personages who are here, serving as privates are:

Judge Kelley, Republican Member of Congress from Philadelphia.

Philip S. White, Prothonatory District Court of Philadelphia.

Rev. Mr. Rittenhouse, Pastor of Arch-street M. E Church, Philadelphia.

Dr. Scott, D.D., President of Washington College.

Dr. Aldrich, Professor of Languages, Washington College.

G. A. Nichols, Superintendent Philadelphia Rail. road Company.

C. M. Reed, formerly President of the Bank of Little Washington.

H. H. Muhlenberg, Cashier of Farmers' Bank, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Joan H. Erwing, late Member of Congress from Washington District.

C. Biddle, Member of Congress.

Mr. Donahue, Editor Washington Examiner.

Mr. Hawes, Editor Reading Times.

Mr. Griffin, formerly Sheriff of Washington County

Heister Clymen, State Senator.

Joseph Henderson, prominent lawyer.

Judge KELLY, who is renominated for Congress, having exchanged the political for the military campaign, is attired in gray shirt, black pants, with haversack and canteen swung over his shoulder. When I saw him on Saturday, he had his coat off and stood manning the battery to which he is attached. A shot from him in his new capacity may tell as effectually as some of a different character which he has been wont to discharge among the rebel plotters at Washington. Believing that the best way to protect Pennsylvania from invasion was to march on and meet the invaders, the militia, with but few exceptions, left Camp Curtin, three miles from Chambersburgh for Hagerstown, reaching here Thursday and Friday. Ten thousand crossed the river in a body. Gov. CURTIN made a neat speech to them here on Friday, complimenting them for their patriotism in having crossed the line and offered their lives in defence of a neighboring State. By his vigorous policy, Gov. CURTIN has added to his former popularity among friends, and excited the admiration of his political enemies.

Soon after crossing the Potomac at Williamport on Friday, the enemy set out toward Hagerstown on a heavy reconnoissance and were repulsed by the militia. A second attempt made at midnight proved no more successful. On the following day, expecting an attack, the militia were drawn up in battle array, together with a portion of Gen. KENLEY'S splendid Maryland Brigade which arrived from Baltimore during Friday night. About three miles from the village the first line of battle was formed across the road, consisting of the Blue and Gray Reserves from Philadelphia; the Alleghany Co. Regiment, Col. MCCOMB, and other troops—in all to the number of five thousand, under command of Col. KNEASS. Not far in advance two hundred of ANDERSON'S Cavalry were drawn up, having scouts extending toward Williamsport. The second line of battle was formed about three-quarters of a mile in rear of the first, extending from a haystack on the left to a woods on the right, being about half a mile in length, and under the command of Major VONDES, who, you will remember, was captured at Santa Rosa and held for months at Richmond and Salisbury, N. C., as a hostage for the safe return of the privateers confined in the Tombs. A Dahlgren battery, under command of Prof. MILLER, of the Pennsylvania Law University School, was planted in the road, one gun behind another. Reserves were posted in large numbers along the turnpike to Hagerstown. Brig.-Gen. REYNOLDS had command of all the forces. As the men were filing off to their places I observed that Judges KELLEY and WHITE took the lead. About 11½ o'clock the First and Seventh Regiments of KENLEY'S Brigade, marched out of town to support and lead on the militia. In the meantime Gen. COUCH'S Division had been sent up from Sharpsburgh to Williamsport, and we were congratulating ourselves on the prospect of bagging the rebels. Our forces continued posted in the above manner until about five o'clock.

It then having been ascertained that the enemy did not intend an attack in any force, and a few thousand only being required to cooperate with Gen. COUCH, the Militia were withdrawn and the Maryland regiments pushed further to the front. One cannon remaining posted at the toll-gate, occasionally shelling the rebels, who were located behind the small body of woods one mile distant, and displayed numerous signal lights. I left the ground at 8½ o'clock in the evening, fully believing that the enemy were in our toils. What, then, was my chagrin and mortification on awakening on the morrow, to find that they had slipped through our fingers, having recrossed the river about 2 o'clock Sunday morning. Everybody shared in the disappointment.

The rebel rule in this place continued only four days. TOOMBS was in command. The conciliatory policy was pursued in the same manner as at Frederick. Citizens, as a general thing, were unmolested and private property undisturbed. Though careful not to touch the property of Marylanders, the rebel bands thieved and plundered indiscriminately whenever crossing the Pennsylvania line. Many farmers lost every horse they had.

Men, women and children hailed the return of our forces to the village with joy. The wounded soldiers brought from the recent battle-fields have received every care and attention from the ladies here, who flit to and fro, administering to their wants.

The dead bodies of Col. CROSSDALE, Capt ANDREWS of Reading, and Capt. BROOKS, of Harrisburgh, were brought here yesterday from Sharpsburgh. The Lyceum Hall has been turned into a hospital, for which purpose it answers admirably. The following are the names of sick and wounded soldiers at present confined there:

Affairs at Hagerstown—Movement of the National and Confederate Forces—A Bold Raid.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1862.

Nothing of military importance is at present transpiring in Hagerstown. The chief point of interest is at Williamsport, where the right of the line is stationed. Near that place we are massing troops, but whether for the purpose of crossing into Virginia or intimidating the rebels from again coming to this side does not seem clear. A feeling exists in the army that we should follow the rebels without delay, regardless of consequences. Those who entertain that opinion, have faith in the maxim, "nothing risked, nothing gained." All, with but few exceptions, agree that the golden opportunity for crushing out the rebellion this year, vanished when the rebels were allowed to depart from Maryland. Not only is the army disappointed, but the citizens in all the towns through which I have passed partake of the disappointment.

It is believed that the main force of the rebels is now in the vicinity of Winchester. As the authorities were ignornant of the whereabouts of the enemy when he was only three miles from our front, it would be doing them injustice to suppose that they were now thoroughly acquainted with his precise position. When the rebels were in Maryland, we had them surrounded, and could have easily captured them. Then we could look forward to a speedy and successful termination of the war; now we cannot penetrate five minutes into the future. Every day and every hour the rebels are preparing to resist our progress west of the Potomac. Opposite Williamsport they have planted a battery, and are ready to open upon us the moment we attempt to cross at that point.

Yesterday morning 100 of their cavalry crossed at Cherry Run, ten miles above Williamsport, and during the day were scouring the country in the vicinity of Cold Spring. They took two of our cavalry prisoners. A citizen of Williamsport, who was with our cavalrymen, escaped and brought intelligence of the rebel presence. A heavy force of cavalry started out in pursuit of the rebels last night.

I think the people of the North can assure themselves that the Fall campaign is about ended. It is true that there is a continual movement of troops on this side of the river all the way from Harper's Ferry to Williamsport, but all it amounts to is a change of position from right to left, and vice versa, without the significance of an advance.

During the brief stay of the rebels in Hagerstown, business was generally suspended. A resident informs me that about 100,000 of their troops passed through the place. The town has again assumed its business air, and the people are doing their utmost to alleviate the sufferings of the wounded brought into the place. Strangers are entertained with the kindest hospitality. WHIT.

THE WAR IN KENTUCKY.

The Race Between the Armies of Buell and Bragg.

The Positions of the Opposing Forces.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, Sept. 25—Midnight.

The armies of BUELL and BRAGG left Lebanon, Penn., and Carthage, respectively, on the 21st, BUELL following the arc, and BRAGG the chord of a circle. Our army traveled 361, and BRAGG'S 206 miles. BUELL got into Northern Kentucky one day ahead of BRAGG, notwithstanding the immense excess of our transportation over that of the enemy.

Col. WILDER, of the Seventeenth Indiana, has arrived, having been exchanged with the rebels for one Lieutenant and twenty-six privates.

Rumors creating some excitement are afloat of the movement of two divisions of BRAGG'S army, but the direction or purpose cannot be ascertained to-night.

LATE NEWS FROM LOUISVILLE.

The Louisville Journal, of Tuesday, contains the following items of interest:

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

TO THE PEOPLE OF LOUISVILLE: The insolent and unprincipled enemies of our State and Nation are moving in force upon this city. Of this there is no longer a shadow of doubt. If they shall be enabled to make good their purpose to take possession of the commercial emporium of the State, consequences will follow that will be deplored by every patriot. Now is the time for every friend of his country, its Constitution and laws, to rally to their support.

Not a moment is to be lost. Manliness and patriotism alike point out to every one the path of duty; and it is earnestly hoped that no man who values the peace of the State, the safety of the city, the repose of his family, and the integrity of the Commonwealth, will falter now in the discharge of the high duty which devolves upon him as a citizen of Kentucky, and a friend of that glorious Union which has come down to us sanctified by so many glorious recollections, and freighted with such inestimable blessings.

I, therefore, as the Governor of the Commonwealth, call upon the citizens of Louisville, young and old, to rally to the defence of their homes, their families, and their city. Attach yourselves, with such drums as you have, to the military force, which, under the gallant NELSON, has determined to peril their lives in your defence. Positions will be assigned you where you can render service and acquire distinction.

This appeal is not made to you as a mere matter of form; its necessity is imperative; and the safety of the city of Louisville demands it.

I repeat, then, let not a moment be lost. Loyal Kentucky expects every man to do his duty at this momentous crisis in her history.

Once more I invoke you to arms; resist your enemies to the death; and poising yourselves upon the right, rely upon the God of battles and the justice of your cause for success. JAS. F. ROBINSON.

Done in the City of Louisville, this 22d day of September, 1862.

By the Governor,

D. C. WICKLIFFE, Secretary of State.

GEN. NELSON'S ADDRESS TO HIS ARMY.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF KENTUCKY, LOUISVILLE, Sept, 22, 1862.

SPECIAL ORDER, No. 17.—Soldiers, intelligence has reached me that the rebel hordes, who are now ravaging the fair land of Kentucky, are advancing to attack this city.

We will give them a bloody welcome. Let every man feel the importance of the occasion, and do his whole duty.

A little patience and energy is all that is required. Be attentive to the commands of your officers. Keep steady in your ranks, and fire coolly and with aim, and victory will attend us.

Officers will set an example to their soldiers of resolution, patience and endurance; and make good, by their bearing, their pretensions to their rank which their several States have conferred on them.

Fellow-soldiers! shoulder to shoulder we will meet the enemy, and rival on the plains of Louisville the glory won by our fellow-soldiers at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Pea Ridge, and other memorable fields of honor.

W. NELSON,
Major-General Commanding.

BRAGG'S MOVEMENTS.

We received information last evening from reliable sources, which leads us to believe that the main forces of BRAGG'S rebel army would arrive at Bardstown yesterday afternoon. His cavalry advance was in Bloomfield yesterday. Bloomfield is eight miles east of Bardstown from this city. There is a turnpike-road from Bloomfield through the valley to the Bardstown turnpike. BRAGG'S force in the vicinity of Bardstown last evening was estimated at fifty thousand, but the estimate may exceed or fall short of his actual force.

We do not regard BRAGG'S movement by way of Bardstown as a threat against Louisville. He is in constant communication with this city through the medium of the rebel sympathizers in Louisville, and they have no doubt fully posted him as to the formidable Federal force before this city, and, dreading the fatal encounter which would follow an attack in this quarter, he may be making for the Bluegrass region in all haste, where he no doubt hopes to find undisturbed rest for his jaded army.

Our theory may be incorrect, but we do not think that BRAGG'S present intention is to march upon Louisville. Indeed, such policy would be suicidal, as, in the event that the rebel army should succeed in capturing this city, it could not be held for a single day by the victorious enemy, as we are aware (and the knowledge of the fact has not been withheld from the public) that our commanding General will make such resistance as will involve the destruction of our much-loved and beautiful city, or rid it forever of the presence of an insolent and desperate foe.

A BRILLIANT FEDERAL VICTORY.

A detachment of ninety-five members of the Fourth Indiana Cavalry, under command of Capt. SHULER, made their appearance in the vicinity of Lebanon Junction about 9 o'clock on Sunday morning, having been sent out as scouts from Shepherdsville. When within about one mile of the Junction, Capt. SHULER encountered a force of three hundred of FORREST'S Cavalry, and a sharp engagement took place, which resulted in the complete rout of the rebels, who sustained a loss of five in killed, seventeen wounded, and thirty-two prisoners. Included in the prisoners, who were brought to the city last evening, was a rebel Captain named CHILDRESS, from Texas, who had boasted but a day or two preceding the fight, that one of his men was equal to three Yankees. The Federals had two killed and lost eleven prisoners. We received the above information from Capt. HOAR, of Clarke County, Indiana, whose gallantry while in the fight is acknowledged by his command.

ARRESTS AT CLOVERPORT.

The Federal commander of the Home Guards of Cloverport, Kentucky, has arrested some thirty or forty of the most prominent rebel sympathizers in that town and vicinity, and declares his purpose to hold them as hostages for the Union citizens arrested at Brandenburgh and other points along the river. This officer declares that if any harm comes to Union citizens arrested by rebels along the border, he will retaliate on the rebels now in his possession.

A COMPANY CAPTURED.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 25.

A letter from Corporal GAW, of the Gymnast Zouaves, of this city, Company B, Twenty-third Pennsylvania Regiment, reports the capture of an entire company, with three exceptions, while on special service, on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Official Reports of the Skirmishing Along the Mississippi Central Railroad.

A GALLANT AFFAIR AT BRITTON'S LANE.

Five Thousand Rebels Defeated by Eight Hundred National Troops.

Failure of the Rebel Demonstrations.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Sept. 25.

The following official dispatches have been received at Headquarters of the Army of the United States:

HEADQUARTERS 2D DIVISION, DISTRICT OF JACKSON, BOLIVAR, Tenn., Aug. 30, 1862.

Capt. A. H. Ryan, Aid-de-Camp and Chief of Staff:

Col. LEGGETT, commanding First Brigade, was sent out by me this morning on the Grand Junction Road, with one regiment of his brigade, four companies of the Second Illinois Cavalry, commanded by Lieut.-Col. HOGG; two companies of the Second Illinois Cavalry, under command of Major PATTERSON, and one section of artillery, with instructions to drive off a force of the enemy's cavalry, supposed to be 150 strong, and reconnoitre the country.

Upon arriving at the ground, Col. LEGGETT at once became engaged with a large force of the enemy's cavalry. The engagement lasted about seven hours, mostly skirmishing, but occasionally becoming a hand-to-hand fight, our forces repelling charges of the enemy's cavalry.

About 4 o'clock in the afternoon the enemy drew back, and Col. LEGGETT receiving reinforcements about that time, they did not renew the attack. I then ordered Col. LEGGETT to fall back with his entire force to a position inside our picket lines, where he is now stationed, expecting a renewal of the attack at daylight.

We have had in killed and wounded about twenty-five—Lieut.-Col. HOGG, of the Second Illinois Cavalry, among the number.

During the engagement to-day all the men, infantry, cavalry and artillery, behaved with the greatest gallantry, and though opposed to largely superior numbers, not only maintained their ground, but drove the enemy back. The force of the enemy engaged was seven regiments of cavalry.

Yours, respectfully,
M. M. CROCKER,
Colonel Thirteenth Iowa Volunteers, Commanding Second Divison, District of Jackson, at Bolivar, Tenn.

HEADQUARTERS, COMMANDER OF THE POST, JACKSON, TENN., Sept. 6, 1862.

Capt. M. J. Kimball, Aid-de-Camp:

SIR: I have the honor to report the following, concerning the recent engagements along the line of the Mississippi Central Railroad, and in the vicinity of Medon Station:

Immediately after the repulse of the enemy at Bolivar, large bodies of his cavalry attacked the different detachments stationed along the line of the Mississippi Central Railroad, between Medon and Toones Station. The detachments being small, (consisting at most, of single companies,) after sharp skirmishing, retired to Medon Station, at which point, and near the railroad depôt, a barricade was constructed of cotton bales, under the direction of Adjutant FRENCH, of the Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry.

At 3 P. M. (of Aug. 31, the enemy attacked the defences at Medon in force, estimated to be one thousand five hundred strong, but were gallantly held at bay by about one hundred and fifty men of the Forty-fifth Illinois.

Being informed of the attack on Medon, I immediately sent six companies of the Seventh Missouri Infantry, under Major W. S. OLIVER, by railroad, with instructions to reinforce our men at that place. On the arrival of the train at Medon the Seventh immediately formed into line and charged the enemy, driving him from the town and inflicting considerable loss upon him; also, taking a large number of prisoners.

As soon as I was informed of the demonstration on Bolivar, I ordered the force stationed at Estanaula, under command of Col. DENNIS, of the Thirtieth Illinois, to this post. Col. DENNIS' command consisted of the Thirtieth Illinois, commanded by Major WARREN SHEDD; Twentieth Illinois, commanded by Capt. FRISBIE; a section of two pieces of gunboat artillery and two companies of cavalry, commanded by Capt. FOSTER.

Col. DENNIS struck tents on the morning of Aug. 31, destroying such stores and baggage as he was unable to carry, and marched to within twelve miles of this post, where he was met by an order from me directing him to march for Medon Station, to intercept the enemy near that point. Col. DENNIS countermarched his command, arriving in the vicinity of Denmark that night.

About 10 o'clock A. M., on the 1st of September, his advance guard reported the enemy in strong force at Britton's Lane, near the junction of the Denmark and Medon roads. The enemy's force consisted of seven regiments of cavalry, viz.: Barstow's, Adams', Stevens', Jackson's, Forrest's, Wheeler's and Parsons', amounting in the aggregate to 5,000 men, under the command of Brig.-Gen. ARMSTRONG. The aggregate of Col. DENNIS' force was but 800. Discovering that he was outnumbered, Col. DENNIS immediately selected the best position the ground would admit and formed in line of battle. The position was in a large grove surrounded by farms, the fields all being in corn,—the wood and some broken ground being in the rear and the cornfields in front—the line being on a ridge.

The greatly superior force of the enemy enabled him to entirely surround the command of Col. DENNIS, and early in the engagement to capture the transportation train, taking with it the teamsters and sick as prisoners. They also captured the two pieces of artillery, but were unable to get possession of the caissons and ammunition. During the engagement the artillery and train were recaptured by Col. DENNIS, the enemy having destroyed four of the wagons by fire.

The enemy made many determined charges, dividing their forces and dismounting a part. They attacked both as infantry and cavalry, the latter charging so close as to fall from their horses almost within the ranks of our men.

The battle was of four hours' duration, at the end of which time the enemy left Col. DENNIS in possession of the field, leaving 179 of his dead on the field, and also a large number of his wounded. The total loss of the enemy in killed and wounded is over 400. The loss of Col. DENNIS is five, buried on the field immediately after the action. The wounded numbered about 50, who were brought to the general hospital at this post the day after the battle.

Great praise should be given to the admirable generalship and ability displayed by Col. DENNIS, and in fact, every officer acted with the greatest bravery. When all did so nobly, it would perhaps be invidious to particularize. Great credit is due Capt. FRISBIE, commanding the Twentieth Illinois, and to Maj. SHEDD, commanding the Thirtieth Illinois; also, to Adjt. PEYTON, of the Thirtieth, who, severely wounded, refused to leave the field. Maj. SHEDD was also wounded. Great praise is due Capt. FOSTER, commanding the cavalry, he rendering Col. DENNIS important aid on every part of the field. The men acted with the most veteran courage. Surgeon GOODNAKE, of the Twentieth Illinois, was untiring in his attention to the wounded, and for skill is deserving of great praise. Accompanying this report, I send a list of the killed and wounded as furnished by him. I have the honor to be, respectfully,

M. R. LAWLESS,
Colonel Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS, DISTRICT OF JACKSON, JACKSON, Sept. 7, 1862.

Col. Jno. A. Rawlins, A. A. G.:

I have the honor to submit the following report of the operations of troops under my command during the 30th and 31st days of August, and the 1st day of September, instant.

On the morning of the 31st of August, I received a dispatch from Col. M. M. CROCKER, commanding at Bolivar, that that post was threatened by a large force advancing from the South, and subsequently that Col. LEGGETT had been sent out to make an attack on the advancing columns of the enemy, that a skirmish had taken place with a force supposed to be about four thousand strong, and that reinforcements had been asked for and sent forward. Feeling that an attack was being made on Bolivar, I took the first train to that place. On arriving, I ascertained that a severe skirmish had taken place four miles south of Bolivar, between the forces under Col. LEGGETT, consisting of the Twentieth and Seventy-eighth Regiments of Ohio Volunteers, four companies of the Second Illinois Cavalry, under Lieut.-Col. HOGG, two companies of the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, under Maj. PATTERSON, and one section of artillery, and the whole rebel force. After a skirmish of about seven hours by our infantry, our artillery was brought to bear upon the enemy; this, followed by a gallant charge of our cavalry, under Lieut.-Col. HOGG, drove the enemy from the field. In this charge, Col. HOGG fell, while engaged in a hand-to-hand fight with Col. MCCULLOCH, by a shot fired by one of MCCULLOCH'S men.

Night coming on, our forces fell back to within supporting distance of the balance of the division, formed a line and awaited a renewal of the attack; but in the morning, the enemy was nowhere in sight, but I heard that his main force had moved to our right, and had gone north.

Fearing an attack on Jackson in force, the place being but weakly garrisoned, without fortifications, I directed that Col. DENNIS, stationed at Estinaula with the Twentieth and Thirtieth, two companies of cavalry, under Capt. FOSTER, and one section of artillery, return at once to Jackson, for which place I took the first train. Within an hour of my return, I am informed the telegraph wires were cut and railroad bridges fired between here and Bolivar, and that four companies of the Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteers at Medon, under Capt. PALMER, were attacked by superior numbers.

Six companies of the Seventh Missouri Volunteers, under Major OLIVER, were at once sent forward to reinforce Medon. Orders were also dispatched to Col. DENNIS, who was moving toward this place, to change his direction toward Medon, attack the enemy in the rear, and if possible, cut them to pieces and capture them.

Major OLIVER, with his six companies of the Seventh Missouri, moved at once to Medon by railroad and attacked the enemy vigorously and drove them from the field. The enemy had previously taken prisoners some forty of our pickets, along the line of the railroad, but being driven from Medon and the line of the railroad, and closely pursued, he retired on the road leading to Denmark.

When about six miles from Denmark, on the following morning, the enemy's advance was met by the advanced forces of Col. DENNIS' command, 800 strong. Both parties prepared for action. Col. DENNIS, selecting a strong position for resisting a cavalry charge, awaited the attack. The forces of the enemy numbered some six thousand. The engagement resulted an a victory to our arms, the most brilliant of the war. The enemy left 179 on the field dead; wounded, not known how many. Our loss is five killed, and fifty-one wounded. After this engagement, the enemy retired beyond the Hatchie, toward La Grange.

For particulars in regard to the above engagements, and for lists of killed and wounded, I beg leave to refer you to the reports of Col. CROCKER, Thirteenth Iowa Volunteers, and Col. LAWLESS, Eighteenth Illinois Volunteers, inclosed herewith.

In each of these engagements the skill and gallantry of the officers, and the cool, determined courage of the men, deserve the highest commendation.

Your obedient servant,
LEONARD T. ROSS,
Brig.-Gen. Commanding District.

RUMOR OF ANOTHER DRAFT.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 25.

The Washington Star says: "For twenty-four hours past it has been currently stated that the President designs at once issuing a call for an additional draft that will increase our army in the field one million men. We trust the rumor may prove true, though we are not able to say so.

We believe that, though successful in dispersing the cavalry guard recently holding Ashby's Gap, Col. R. B. PRICE, of the Second Pensylvania Cavalry, woefully failed to accomplish what must have been the main object of the expedition, the destruction of 900 wagons of LEE'S army, known to have been at the time laying three miles behind that Gap.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Yesterday afternoon the Steamer Thomas Swan arrived with seventy Secesh prisoners from New-York, which caused the flag of truce boat Canonicus to return immediately to Aiken's Landing.

The Swan also had on board sixty Union soldiers who had been absent from their Regiments from sickness and other causes, under arrest, going to Washington, D. C.

It is understood that all of Gen. POPE'S officers, now at Ricemond, are to come down the river next Saturday for exchange.

A flag of truce boat arrived this morning from Aiken's Landing, but brings no news or papers.

Protest Against Sending Presents to Soldiers.

CENTRAL OFFICE, SANITARY COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, Sept. 20, 1862.

The Sanitary Commission, at the request of Gen. HALLECK, Commanding in Chief the Armies of the United States, most earnestly advises against the practice of sending presents to soldiers of articles which it is supposed will add to the conveniences of their camp life. To the knowledge of the Commission, many hundred tons of such presents are now piled uselessly in store-houses and yards, and upon old camp-grounds; while thousands have probably been destroyed to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy, and but a small part of all that have been received by those to whom they were addressed have been of the smallest value to them, except as tokens of the affectionate interest of their friends. For this purpose, letters and such other small and light articles as can be transmitted by mail would have been much better. Larger gifts occasion serious practical mischief—men and officers being naturally averse to throwing them away—they add to the incumbrances, which are a chief cause of the excessive fatigue, and thus of the sickness of the soldier. Volunteers almost universally, until they learn better by dear-bought experience, undertake to carry an excessive amount of clothing. To this cause, and to the excessive baggage of their officers, some of the severest losses of the Union in the present war are attributed by the highest military authority. But even when successful in battle, the attempt to secure comfort by the possession of an unusual amount of clothing is nearly always frustrated—the heaviest knapsacks being thrown away at the first long-continued hard march, while the light one is retained, and the long and heavily laden wagon train being cut off, when the light and short one is protected. Similar observations apply to regimental hospitals. The hospital of a regiment in the field should be supplied with nothing but the barest necessities for the temporary treatment of the sick, who in all serious cases are removed as fast as possible to general hospitals, where the supplies of the regiment are not available. An excessive amount of regimental hospital stores and conveniences is a cruelty to the sick and woun

IMPORTANT FROM MEMPHIS.

Adventures of a British Cotton Buyer in Mississippi—Rebel Movements Through Grenada Lately—Breckinridge at Holly Springs with a Large Force—Villipigue Fifteen Miles from Memphis, with Twelve Thousand Men—Memphis and Fort Pillow to be Attacked—Price to Cross into Missouri—Hindman Marching Toward Helena, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MEMPHIS, Friday, Sept. 19, 1862.

Yesterday I received from a gentleman, who claims to be a British subject, buying cotton for shipment to Canada, and who was captured near this city by guerrillas some three weeks ago, an account of his experiences in Mississippi from that time until yesterday, when he reached this city. He brings important intelligence concerning the movement of rebel forces in this vicinity, and also of rebel plans which he supposes are now in process of being carried out.

He left Memphis about the 27th of August, on a steamer going down the river. His intention was to make his way to the nearest rebel force, and on to the rebel headquarters in Mississippi, where he expected to get permission to buy cotton, and take his own chances of running it through the blockade.

With this intention he landed from the steamer at a point twelve miles below this city, in Mississippi.

There was no house at the place where he landed, but seeing a plantation house about half a mile further down the river, he proceeded to it with the object of inquiring the whereabouts of the nearest rebel force, and the means of reaching it.

When he arrived at the house he discovered several armed men lounging and standing about the piazza; he, however, walked in, and was immediately accosted by one of them, who inquired his business and where he came from. He told his story, said he was a British subject, and produced his passport. The captain of the band glanced at the document.

"Well," said he, "how do I know but this is a forgery? These d—d Yankee cotton buyers are up to just such tricks, and I don't know but you are one of them. At any rate I shall arrest you." Mr. —— was accordingly placed upon a horse, and sent off in the direction of Senatoba. The captain of the band also sent by the guard a letter to the commandant of Senatoba, detailing the circumstances of his arrest, but stating also that he had landed from a National gunboat, which he knew was not the case. About half-way to Senatoba, Mr. —— was delivered to the captain of another band, who, after reading the letter, added a note to it, saying he believed Mr. —— to be a dangerous man, probably a spy. He arrived at Senatoba that evening, and was immediately sent on to Grenada, and placed in the military prison.

During his imprisonment he addressed several of the rebel commanders, asking the character of the charges against him, and requesting an investigation. No answer was received, however, and no investigation was made, and he was finally released without any investigation, when the military prison at Grenada was declared closed by VAN DORN's order, rescinding his declaration of military law throughout Mississippi.

At the time of his capture, Lord PALMERSTON's speech, advocating non-intervention and strict neutrality on the part of England between the Northern and Southern States of America, had just been published in the Southern papers, and the rebels were bitter in their denunciations of "England's perfidy," and the conclusion that he arrived at, was that Englishmen and English passports were at a huge discount among the rebels.

The military prison, at Grenada, was near the dépôt, and was a building temporarily put up for that purpose, the windows being barred but without sash, so that he could not help seeing and hearing all that passed.

During the last ten days he observed that immense trains were continually passing North, crowded to their utmost capacity with troops. Some of these trains were apparently a quarter of a mile in length, and frequently four or five such trains would pass northward during the day, and the empty cars be sent back during the night. Some idea of the crowded state of these trains may be conceived from the fact that eight deserters from PRICE's army, who had been confined in the prison at Grenada, and who were to be sent back to PRICE when he was encamped near Abbyville, had been taken from the prison down to each train that passed for two days before sufficient room could be found for them in the cars.

As many as sixty or seventy thousand men must have passed Grenada, going to Holly Springs.

Whenever a train would pass through, great numbers of the citizens and soldiers located at Grenada would flock to the dépôt, and as these came back after the train had passed, Mr.—— could hear all the conversation that passed between them, and from continually recurring remarks in their conversation, and between the prison guards and the other soldiers, he learned that though these troops, which were BRECKINRIDGE's Division, were to go to Holly Springs only by rail, yet, that as soon as the entire force should come up, it was to move immediately to attack Memphis. He learned also from the deserters from PRICE's army that PRICE was moving up to join BRECKINRIDGE at Holly Springs, that the two were to combine in a movement on Memphis and Fort Pillow, and from the latter place PRICE was to cross into Missouri.

It did not transpire whether the movement was to be first upon Fort Pillow—BRECKINRIDGE, in a manner, convoying PRICE to Fort Pillow, and leaving a force at that place to protect his erossing, and then falling back upon Memphis, and attacking it on the north, while VILLIPIGUE (who is fifteen miles north of Hernando, and consequently only fifteen miles from this city) should attack it on the south. I say it did not transpire whether this was to be the plan, or whether the combined forces of BRECKINRIDGE and PRICE were to attack it on the east, and VILLIPIGUE on the south, as both plans were common talk with the citizens and soldiers; but that there is a firm belief among the rebels that one of the two plans is to be immediately initiated, my informant is confident.

Of the strength of PRICE's army I could learn nothing except that his cavalry numbers fifteen thousand. His army, however, is greatly demoralized. Hundreds of his men are deserting every day and trying to make their way to the Mississippi, near Helena, or to Memphis. Seventeen deserters from PRICE's Division were brought to the prison at Grenada in one gang. They had made their way to the bank of the Mississippi opposite Helena, but before they could get across they were captured by the guerrillas, who swarm along the east bank of the river, and brought to Grenada.

These deserters were clothed in rags. Several of them were barefooted and looked wretched. They said they were from Missouri, as were also the most of PRICE's men; that they had been in the rebel army and absent from their families sixteen months, during the whole of which time they had received only four months' pay.

These men corroborated the report that it was the intention to attack Memphis and Fort Pillow, and that it was PRICE's intention to cross the Mississippi somewhere above Memphis into Missouri.

Conscription was being carried on by the rebels in the most despotic and unscrupulous manner. Men were fleeing from the country in every direction to escape it, but were chased down by the guerrilla bands and brought back. Numbers who had escaped from Vicksburgh and other places, had been captured and were brought into the military prison at Grenada. When the military prison was declared closed by the abolition of military law, nearly all that were in the prison, no matter what was their alleged offence, were conscripted and sent to the school of military instruction at Brookhaven, which is on the Mississippi Central Railroad, south of Jackson, Miss.

In regard to provisions at Grenada, there was no scarcity of such articles as constituted the army food, viz., corn bread and bacon; but, beyond these, it was almost impossible to procure anything eatable. Beef was twenty-five to thirty cents per pound. A chicken could not be bought for less than a dollar and a half.

When, after three weeks' imprisonment, my informant was released without having the charges against him investigated at all, he was provided with a pass, and a guard to escort him beyond the rebel lines, toward Memphis. On arriving, however, at a point about four or five miles [illegible] on night before last, he was stopped by a guerrilla band, by whom himself and escort were compelled to go several miles eastward to where they were encamped. Here he was detained all night, but was allowed to proceed yesterday morning.

During that night several messengers were sent back and forth between the camp where he was and VILLIPIGUE's camp, which, he afterwards learned, was only a few miles north.

The number of VILLIPIGUE's force he did not learn: he heard, however, that VILLIPIGUE had been joined by JACKSON's Cavalry and PINSON's Cavalry, and that the guerrilla bands which, for some weeks past, have infested the country west of the Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad, were being concentrated at the same place.

Mr. ——, in his first report of himself to the captain of the band who captured him, had said that he was from Memphis, and had been there some weeks. On the strength of this he was several times questioned by the Provost-Marshal at Grenada, and by other officers, as to the situation in Memphis. All of them asked him repeatedly if the Yankee merchants had not heavy stocks of goods, clothing, etc., there. On his answering in the affirmative, they generally said that there would soon be a "skedaddle" from Memphis, and other remarks to that effect.

But letting all these remarks pass for mere bravado, and all the other talk for nothing, yet one thing is evident, and that is, that we may expect some sudden movement in large force, by the rebels, within a few days. It is certain that BRECKINRIDGE is at Holly Springs, (which is only thirty miles from here,) if not north of that place, with an army that must approximate to a hundred thousand men, and that VILLIPIGUE is not over fifteen miles south of this city, with a force whose numbers we do not know, but which we know is daily being reinforced by the guerrilla bands.

Gen. SHERMAN, however, has been on the watch for such a movement for some time, and has made his arrangements accordingly. The fortifications are complete, and I should not wonder if we should have fiery times here within a few days.

Another fact which may have some connection with the supposed rebel plans is, that Gen. STEEL, now in command at Helena, received information that HINDMAN, with a force of fifteen or twenty thousand, was moving toward Helena. If this is a fact, it is, in all probability, intended as a feint to distract attention from this place; but Gen. STEEL's army is strong enough to whip HINDMAN and send large reinforcements to this place, if any other reinforcement than the gunboat fleet should be needed. F.

GROVER'S DIVISION,

Suicide of Lieut. Alonzo Coy.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

HEADQUARTER'S FIRST BRIGADE GROVER'S DIVISION, (FORMERLY HOOKER'S,) CAMP NEAR ALEXANDRIA, Va., Saturday, Sept. 20, 1862.

It becomes my painful task to inform you of the sudden and unnatural death of First Lieut. ALONZO COY, of the Eleventh Massachusetts Regiment, and A. A. Quartermaster of this Brigade, who about noon to-day shot himself through the brain at these headquarters. It was not an accidental casualty, but the deliberate work of his own hand.

A few days since his business led him to Washington, where he lost or had stolen from his pocke promissory notes to the amount of nearly $1,000 since which time he had appeared unusually depressed. Yesterday he was quite ill, and his illness, together with his loss, doubtless overruled his customary firmness, and to some degree unsettled his mind. Upon business matters, however, his intellect and judgment remained clear and collected as usual, but a vague apprehensiveness of harm and injury from his firmest friends seemed to possess his faculties.

About noon, Major TRIPP, of the Eleventh Massachusetts, passed the door of his tent and entered a house standing near, the deceased saluting and speaking in a cheerful tone as he passed. The Quartermaster was, at the time, sitting upon the foot of his bed from which he did not rise. On entering the house, the Major seated himself at a window looking directly toward the quarters of the deceased. He saw him stoop forward and immediately afterward heard the report of a pistol, and looking toward the direction of the sound, saw the Quartermaster throw up his hands and fall across his bed. The Major, with an assistant, rushed into the tent and found his friend lying in the position described with the blood flowing from both temples. The pistol, a heavy revolver, lay upon the floor, having fallen from his grasp. The ball penetrated in nearly a direct line from temple to temple. He was still breathing, though utterly unconscious, and was immediately conveyed to the hospital of his regiment, where he shortly after expired. In death his features were strikingly calm. He will probably be embalmed and sent home to his friends in Boston, Mass. He was, probably, one of the most efficient Quartermasters in the army, and his death has cast a gloom upon the spirits of all who knew him.

He remarked to me, in recounting the circumstance of the pecuniary loss already mentioned, that he must have been deprived of his pocket-book while riding upon one of the street cars in Washington. As he was standing upon the platform, three men leaped upon the step and pushed rudely past him, while one of them, an elderly man, either designedly or by accident, stepped forcibly upon his foot. This called forth a remark from him, and he was roughly answered by the stranger. The three stood in close contact with him for a few moments, then suddenly leaped from the car. Soon after he discovered his loss.

Twenty or thirty secesh prisoners were brought in yesterday, who were taken by our cavalry, about two miles beyond Manassas. They were mounted, and were escorting two ambulances of wounded rebels toward Richmond. There are no rebels in our rear, between these two points. ARGUS.

ROSH HASHONA.

The Jewish New-Year.

Fifty thousand of our fellow-citizens of Hebrew blood were yesterday, and are to-day, engaged in one of the most ancient and solemn observances of the Jewish Faith. Rosh Hashona, or the Head of the Year, comprises the first two days of Tisri, the seventh month of the Israelitish sacred year, or the first of the civil year. In the First Book of Kings, this great month is called Ethanim or Continually Flowing, from the fact that the autumn rains then began to fill the dried up beds of brooks and rivers and to overflow the parched levels of Judea. This latter is the more ancient name, deriving its origin from the patriarchal period preceding the captivity. Nearly coinciding with our Christian October, it was, in some sense, also the late harvest month of the Hebrews, with whom the fullness and ripeness of the year immediately preceded the birth of its successor, and from the growth and culmination of sin in the human heart, the significance of the opening festival is also largely deduced.

This month and New-Year began on Wednesday evening at sunset, and yesterday was celebrated the Feast of Trumpets, the first of a succession of Jewish festivals which will extend over the next four weeks. In the BOOK of Numbers we are told of the two trumpets of beaten silver which the Lord commanded Moses to make, and which were used in the wanderings of the Tribes to summon all the people together when on the eve of departure. These trumpets were subsequently employed at the opening of the solemn ceremonial to proclaim the New Year, and also at the beginning of the Sabbatical year and the Jubilee, as many passages in Numbers and the Book of Leviticus indicate. Hence arises the rite of the Shophar—the Trumpet, or, in still more ancient usage, the Ram's Horn, which is blown by the High Priest in the Synegogue during the worship of the day. It was customary in the strictest Synagogues to offer up, on this day, in addition to the regular monthly sacrifices, a solemn holocaust in the name of the whole nation, and this consisted of a bullock, a ram, a kid, and seven lambs of the same year, with measures of flour and wine. Although, even in the Holy writings, the precise origin of the Feast of Trumpets is not distinctly stated, the entire period of the Rosh Hashonah proper, which covers two entire days, counting, according to Jewish custom, from sunset to sunset, is observed with the utmost reverence and solemnity, and the Israelite who does not, upon this occasion at least, worship like the rest in absolute penitence and self-abasement, to the exclusion of all worldly cares and occupations, is looked upon as a backslider from the ancient faith, and as one in extreme spiritual degradation and peril.

This, being regarded as the day on which the Lord [illegible] each sinner, is to be followed by the ten days of Atonement, ending with the [illegible] of Atonement, when it is believed that the Judicial stamps the seal of his fate upon the destiny of every impenitent for the coming year. Having then been already judged upon the first of these days, it and the remaining ten are to be spent by the worshipper in earnest and self-accusing prayer to God, that the judgment may not be confirmed with the seal of condemnation, and the doom of the year be immediately closed. Thus, understanding the nature and importance of the solemnity, our readers may conceive with what intense earnestness it is observed by all good Israelites. In this City, that numerous body is divided into Orthodox and Reformed Organizations, the first clinging tenaciously to the ancient rites, the latter adopting many modifications—among others, the assemblage of male and female worshipers in one inclosure, whereas in the Orthodox synagogues the sexes are kept apart.

Here, the B'nai Jeshurun Synagogue at No. 164 Greene-street, under the pastorate of the learned and venerable Rabbi I. M. RAPHALL, represents the Old School, and the Synagogue of the Temple at No. 84 East Twelfth-street, Rev. SAMUEL ADLER, Rabbi, the New, there being about thirty synagogues and more private places of Jewish worship, in all. The wealthiest congregation, by repute, assembles at the elegant edifice on Nineteenth-street, near Fifth-avenue, but has no regular Rabbi yet officiating.

At the B'nai Jeshurun, the ceremonies were opened on Wednesday evening by Rev. JUDAH KRAMER, and yesterday, at 10 A. M., the Rev. Rabbi RAPHALL continued the ceremonial of the Feast of Trumpets with the blowing of the Ram's Horn, the chaunting of the prayers of intercession and repentance and the singing of the Hymn of Glory, followed by a brief but earnest exhortation befitting this Jom Hiddim, or Day of Judgment. This festival and those that are to follow it are too solemn to admit of any reference to worldly affairs by the officiating Rabbi, but it is understood that, on Saturday next, the Sabbath of Atonement, Dr. RAPHALL will allude to national trials.

The appearance of the Synagogues, yesterday, was solemn and impressive in the extreme. The priests all wore the shroud, or garment of burial, and the white shawl of penitence enveloped the shoulders of every true believer. The deep plaint of fervent prayer and supplication, rather sobbed than uttered; quaint, wild accent of Hebrew canticles sung as they may have been around the Tabernacle in the wilderness with Moses for High Priest; the physiognomies of Judea as pure in type as when the "Chosen People" dwelt in the tents of Jacob, some presenting all the manly majesty of Abraham, and others all the divine loveliness of Rachel—gave intense effect to these antique and oriental pictures of a day which in addition to its many other distinguishing attributes, is said to commemorate the birth of Adam.

HONORS TO ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.

The Complimentary Resolutions of the Common Council—The Archbishop's Remarks.

At noon, yesterday, a party of gentlemen called on his Grace Archbishop HUGHES, at his residence, and formally presented to him, in behalf of the Common Council, an elegantly engrossed copy of the resolutions of congratulation on his return from Europe, and extending to him the hospitalities of the City, as offered by Alderman BOOLE, and passed by the Common Council, in recognition of his semi-official diplomatic services in behalf of the Union cause, while he was abroad. The party consisted of Aldermen Farley, Boole, Walsh and Brady, Ex-Senator William Mc Murray, Lieut.-Col. J. V. D. Reeve, U. S. A.; Capt. John McMurray, U. S. A.; Albert Cordozo, Esq., and Terence P. Smith, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Board of Aldermen.

Alderman FARLEY having presented the visitors to the Archbishop, and Rev. Father STARRS, V. G., who entered the parlor in company with his Grace, Ex-Senator MCMURRAY made the presentation in a few well-chosen words, expressive of the public appreciation of the zealous patriotism of the distinguished prelate, to which he responded as follows:

HONORED SIR: In accepting these resolutions, it is not to be supposed that I am indifferent to the honor conferred upon me by the municipal representatives of the great City of New-York. I have, since my return, received some kind receptions, and one or two of a most touching character from the orphans and the children of some of our schools, but theirs was a welcome to the Archbishop, while yours is a token of regard to me as a citizen and Bishop, for I do not consider the one incompatible with the other. My being an Archbishop has not prevented me from accepting the kind testimonial offered to the citizen. In appreciation of this I can only offer a feeble expression of my sentiments. It is true that, in going to Europe, I went, it may be said, in something of a semi-official character, but not as the bearer of any special message. I was left entirely to my own judgment in the matter, it being kindly supposed that my knowledge of the country, and my zeal for its welfare, and my own discretion, would be sufficient for the purposes that I might labor to accomplish.

In France and Italy I was received with unspeakable kindness, partly because I was an Archbishop, and partly, no doubt, because I was the Archbishop of the great City of New-York. My object was to correct the erroneous impressions that prevailed abroad, and which had been created in regard to the causes of the present civil war; to point out the mutual advantages between this country and European Powers, of preserving peaceful relations toward each other. My object was to stem the onward current of fixed prejudices against us, in which my endeavors have been more or less successful. In France I was received with especial kindness, and had an interview with the Emperor and Empress, of an hour and a quarter. The conversation was such as might take place between any two private gentlemen entertaining mutual respect and confidence, and if, at the close of the interview, the Emperor did not understand my views and the condition of affairs in this country, it was not my fault. At Rome it was not necessary that I should enter into any explanations in regard to the voyage which I had undertaken, for its object was sufficiently understood. Rome did not require any explanation, for it is not their habit to interfere with the supreme decision of the Governments of other lands in civil matters. If they were not pleased with my advocacy of the cause of the Union, their displeasure was never made known to me, if they entertained any. I do not know that my efforts, after all, had any influence in turning aside anything like interference in our domestic troubles, or that might tend to increase our embarrassments. All the time that I was abroad I did not represent one part of the country more than another, but the whole of it as I once knew it. I had prominently in view humanity and peace, and there was nothing in my mission inconsistent with my ecclesiastical character. This country, as I knew it, was one, and I hope I shall never be called upon to recognize it as two. Let me thank you for the honor which you, as the representatives of this City, have paid me in the resolutions which you have just presented.

Amusements.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—MR. FORREST is in the full tide of one of the most successful engagements that even he has ever played in New-York Each night that he performs Niblo's theatre is crowded to the full extent of its capacity in the way of seats, whilst the spacious lobbies are occupied by patient groups, who cannot be deterred from taking their chances of beholding the great tragedian by announcements of "standing room only" being in store for them. Mr. FORREST's popularity is not a matter for criticism or discussion. However opinions may differ as to his interpretation of this or that character, there is no question that he possesses that marked individuality—that irresistible power of personal magnetism—which compels public attention and respect. The physical may, in his case predominate over the mental, but that is not the point to be considered. Above and beyond all argument concerning his peculiar qualifications for such a part as Damon, or his disqualifications for such a part as Hamlet, stands the incontrovertible fact, that, whatever the part may be he is announced to play, an immense audience will assemble to see him, will be palpably delighted with everything he does, and will applaud him with an enthusiasm that can be elicited by no other actor of the day. Certain it is, if hostile criticism, in the face of this fact, declares that Mr. FORREST has no talent and is deficient in tact, then it cannot avoid the alternative that he must be endowed with some subtle kind of genius which is superior to tact and talent put together; for it is a genius that has raised him to a pinnacle of histrionic greatness, whence he can look down on those whose acknowledged tact and talent have been exerted for years in vain endeavors to supplant him.

If ever Mr. FORREST had a right to demand from his opponents some modification of their antagonism, it has been during his existing engagement. Without yielding his occasional right to give unparalleled effect to certain scenes in his most famous characters by the development of his marvelous physical resources, he has notably toned down the best of his dramatic pictures, giving up many startling effects of light and shade for the sake of producing a more even depth and richness of color. The scholarly, artistic quietness of his Hamlet of the present would astonish many who remember only his Hamlet of the past. So with his Richelieu. From the beginning to the end of the play he subdues his own vigor to the age and infirmities of the Cardinal with an elaborate care and conscientiousness that never desert him—not even in the two or three situations where the text tempts nearly every actor of the part into vehemence. It is in such characters as these that Mr. FORREST now displays the ripe results of a life-time of anxious, untiring study. It is in such characters that he has finally succeeded in so mastering himself as to soften with the influences of years of æsthetic culture the vitality which, in former times, [illegible] irrepressible. Not [illegible] but [illegible] store of vitality left for such parts, for instance, as Damon and Virginius. He proved Virginius last evening, and never, in his life, has he given a more robust and effective personation of the noble Roman.

It is only fair to the management, to say that Mr. FORREST is being supported by an excellent stock company. In "Othello," Mr. WHEATLEY, Mme. PONISI and Mrs. GLADSTANE, as Cassio, Emelia and Desdemona were all admirable. In "Richelieu," MRS. GLADSTANE was a charming Julie, and Mr. WHEATLEY a bold and gallant De Mauprat. MRS. GLADSTANE and Mme. PONISI were exceedingly good, too, in "Virginius."

Mr. FORREST played Hamlet last night. To-night he will probably repeat Virginius. Saturday Mr. HACKETT gives us Falstaff in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." This comedy is represented very fairly throughout, the best acting in it (of course excepting Mr. HACKETT's Falstaff) being by Mr. SHEWELL as Ford, Mr. MARTIN as Doctor Caius, and Miss WELLS' whose Mrs. Quickly can scarcely be awarded too much praise.

WINTER GARDEN.—This evening Miss BATEMAN takes the benefit with which star performers usually terminate an engagement. The general estimation which Miss BATEMAN's abilities as an actress have gained for her will insure the gathering of a generous and crowded audience. The occasion will be specially interesting by the production of a new five-act play, adapted from the French of LEGOUVE by Miss BATEMAN herself, and called "The Madonna of Art." Miss BATEMAN will, of course, play the principal character, and will receive the support of Mr. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., Mr. EDWIN ADAMS, and the very excellent company engaged at the Winter Garden.

The fifth act of "Macbeth" will also be given, to enable Miss BATEMAN to once more appear in the famous sleep-walking scene, which she rendered so finely.

Seventy-ninth New-York Episcopal Diocesan Convention.

At the meeting of the Convention yesterday morning, among the lay delegates appeared Ex-Gov. JOHN A. KING, Dr. JAMES MCKUNE SMITH and JOHN JAY. The last-named gentleman, having been rejected as a delegate from his own parish, was chosen to represent St. Philips, (colored.) Bishop POTTER appeared in the Convention for a brief period, in order to attend to some indispensable business; having left the bedside of his dying son for that purpose. The Convention passed an appropriate resolution of condolence with him in his affliction. Dr. HAIGHT read the Bishop's Address. During the year six churches and chapels have been consecrated; thirty-two clergymen resigned their cures; the Bishop has held over 200 public services, preached 140 times, and confirmed 2,620 dufing the year. The Bishop's Address expressed in unmistakable terms his disapproval of the proposed division of the Diocese.

Grace Church, Nyack, and St. Paul's Church in the Twelfth Ward in this City, and the Church of the Mediator of this City, were admitted to the Convention. The question of the admission of Free Churches was referred to a committee to report at the next Convention.

The receipts of the Society for the Promotion of Religion and Learning were $271 06; the expenses $884 50, last year. The receipts and balance on hand of the Society for the Aid of Aged and Infirm Clergy amounted to $9,228 40; the expenses $4,394. The clerical beneficiaries of the fund now number sixteen—two having died during the year. The report of St. Stephen's College showed that institution to be in a prosperous condition, and the sum of $5,000 only is needed to pay the indebtedness.

The report of the committee appointed to consider the proposed amendment of the act for the incorporation of churches, was read by Hon. MURRAY HOFFMANN, together with the draft of an act proposed to be submitted to the Legislature. The report and act were ordered printed for the future use of the Convention. The Trustees of the Parochial Fund, Messrs. JOHN JAY, M. HOFFMAN, and JAMES F. DE PEYSTER, were reélected, and JOHN JACOB ASTOR, Jr., chosen in place of Hon. LUTHER BRADISH. Dr. SEABURY read a very long and highly interesting majority report of the Committee on Ascertaining and Defining the Boundaries of Parishes. The majority report recommends that no action be taken by the Convention, and that the General Convention be requested to reconsider and review its recent legislation on the subject. Hon. MURRAY HOFFMAN read the minority report, urging the imperative necessity of an accurate definition of the boundaries of Parishes, as well as a rule for the establishment of new churches. He submitted a canon embodying the amendments proposed. Both reports were ordered printed for the use of the Convention.

Gain in Immigration.

From the recent statement of the Commissioners, we learn that the number of immigrants to this port, up to Sept. 24, 1861, was 57,060, and to a corresponding date in 1862 the number is 57,714, showing an increase of but 625 instead of 3,000, as was stated by the Journal of Commerce. We are far from feeling that this is a subject for regret—on the contrary, the fact that there has not been a decided decrease is most significant and astonishing. During the past few months, the number of weekly arrivals has been slowly but steadily increasing. The war, so far from expelling emigrants, seems to invite them here. It is believed that when all the inducements come to be fully known in Europe, there will be a sudden and astonishing increase in the number of miners, mechanics, agriculturists, and persons willing to become soldiers, who will seek our shores. Letters, written by foreign residents of this country to their friends at home, stating these extraordinary inducements, will have a great effect on emigration. So also, it is thought, will the public appeal of Secretary SEWARD to the United States Consuls in Europe, recounting the many advantages which the emigrant will enjoy at this time.

A Curious Discovery.

Major PINCKNEY, one of the assistants of Gen ANTHON, in effecting the enrolment in this City and Brooklyn, has made a curious discovery, in which the suffrage rights of a large number of citizens are involved. The Major invented a directory of election districts and streets for this City, and undertook to apply the principle to Brooklyn. He procured all the election district maps of that city, and while carefully describing in his books the boundaries of the districts, discovered the fact that [illegible] blocks in Williamsburgh, situated between Third and Fourth streets and North Fourth and North Fourteenth streets, are not included in any district. A search of the records revealed the fact that the inhabitants of this somewhat populous locality have never had any recognized legal existence; that no votes have ever been recorded there, and, therefore, if any of the citizens have at any time exercised the "right of suffrage," they did so in transgression of the law. One block in South Brooklyn was also found to have been left out by the election district makers. Major PINCKNEY has constituted the neglected localities sub-districts; and it by no means follows that because the citizens have never been allowed to vote, they will be debarred from fighting.

City Politics.

The main interest among City politicians now centres upon the Street Commissioner. Mr. KNAPP yet acts in that capacity, and has not served, as rumored, any injunction upon the Mayor, restraining him from nominating a new man, while Comptroller HAWS refuses to sign any of Mr. KNAPP's checks. This unpleasant state of affairs is not likely to last long, as there is a strong probability of a nomination at the next meeting of the Board.

Should the Mayor nominate, it is considered certain that the name of Mr. THOMAS L. SMITH, of the Twentieth Ward, will first be presented. If the Aldermen reject him, FRED. LAW OLMSTEAD may be the next offer. That failing, Hon. CHARLES SPENCER is suggested as the third man, but that gentleman denies being a candidate. Few would be astonished to see Mr. SMITH's nomination agreed to. He is a Republican of moderate views, and if approved, would not be unwilling to remember who gave him position—a consideration of some importance.

At present there is no certainty of a meeting being called before Monday, although, if a satisfactory conclusion can be arrived at, one may be held on Saturday.

What the Sanitary Commission is Doing.

Under the skillful management of Dr. BELLOWS, the President, and Mr. OLMSTED, the Secretary, the Sanitary Commission is doing a great and good work. From the subjoined note from Mr. OLMSTED, the public will be enabled to understand in what great aggregates this noble Commission works:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.

To Dr. Bellows, President:

SIR: We have sent Dr. AGNEW, since the army of Virginia went to meet the invaders, that is, within ten days: 23,663 pieces of dry goods, shirts, towels, bedticks, pillows, &c.; 30 barrels old linen bandages and lint, 3,188 pounds farina, 2,620 pounds condensed milk, 5,000 pounds beef stock and canned meats, 3,000 bottles wine and cordials, and several tons of lemons and other fruit, crackers, tea, sugar, rubber cloth, tin cups and hospital conveniences.

We are sending more forward constantly. Four thousand sets of hospital clothing will, by special train from New-York, get through to Frederick to-morrow, if money and energy can break through the obstructions of this embarrassed transportation.

Your daily supplies from New-York are reaching us regularly. Respectfully yours,

F. L. OLMSTED.

Another Donation from San Francisco.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20, 1862.

Messrs. W. T. Coleman & Co., New-York:

GENTLEMEN: You are doubtless aware that a fund is raised annually by the citizens of San Francisco for the celebration of Fourth July.

This year, after paying all expenses, there was a surplus of some $3,000 or $4,000, after consulting the contributors as to what distribution should be made among different charitable institutions.

The Sanitary Commission was one of these, and as I am not quite sure who is the proper person in New-York authorized to receive this money, I have taken the liberty to have a draft drawn to your order for $2,125 66—the actual amount was $1,910.

I believe the name of the Treasurer is GEORGE T. STRONG, No. 68 Wall-street. Will you be so kind as to hand him this sum as a donation from the citizens of San Francisco to the Commission, taking a receipt for the same.

Trusting you will excuse the trouble I have given you, I remain, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. F. TESCHOMACHER, Mayor.

Commissioners of Charities and Correction.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of this Board was held yesterday. The report of the Committee of the Whole was presented, from which it appears that from the 12th to the 25th inst., 705 persons were sent to the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island, of whom 521 were females, and 184 males. Nine of the number had served a term at the Island for the one hundredth time. The Board were notified of the arrival of 254 sick and wounded soldiers at the Island Hospital, and a requisition was made for 500 new shirts for their benefit. Four hundred and seventy soldiers have been returned to service from Bellevue Hospital, and 524 from the Island Hospital, since the last meeting of the Board. Five have died, as follows:

Wm. Enga, Co. G, 67th Ohio.

Obituary.

MR. CHARLES BURDETT, for two years past connected with the New-York Times, died suddenly at his residence in this City on Wednesday morning last, in the 48th year of his age. Mr. BURDETT was an adopted son of the celebrated AARON BURR, and was educated at the military school of the late Capt. PARTRIDGE, at Middletown, Connecticut. In early life he obtained a Midshipman's commission in the Navy, and was for several years in the service. He was subsequently connected with the New-York Courier and Enquirer, and still later acted as private secretary to the Mayor under Mr. HAVEMEYER's and Mr. WOOD's administrations. He was also deputy-postmaster of the City under WM. V. BRADY. Of late years he has devoted himself principally to literature, and has published several novels, which obtained a wide circulation, among the most popular of which are Three per cent. a Month; Dora Barton, or The Banker's Ward; and Margaret Moncrief, or The First Love of Aaron Burr. The materials for the last work, which is of an historical character, were derived from private papers left in the hands of the author by his distinguished guardian. Mr. BURDETT was engaged in writing a sequel to this work at the time of his death. He leaves behind him a widow and two children, the eldest, a son, now serving as master's mate in the U. S. Navy,

...Bespeaks have received a hundred bottles of jelly from Painted Post, three large boxes of hospital stores from Pittsfield, Mass.; $10 in money from Mrs. Sheriff; a bundle of underclothing, through Rev. Dr. Bellamier; a bundle of underclothing, through Rev. R. S. S. C., of Brooklyn, L. I., and other small items.

Dr. Campbell takes the place on Bedloe's Island rendered vacant by the removal of Dr. Brown. The service, but escaped the first opportunity. He was clothed, fed and sent to his home in Boston.

Presentation Sword, Sash and Belt.—Messrs. Ball, Black & Co. have just forwarded to the Ninety-ninth Regiment, N.Y. V., now encamped near Norfolk, Va., a magnificent sword, which will be presented by the officers of that regiment to their esteemed Colonel, D. W. Wardrop. The top band of the scabbard, at both ends, is a raised chased scroll and laurel wreath. In the centre of same is a full-length figure of an officer standing, with drawn sword, supporting the National color with the left hand (all in bas-relief.) The centre band is formed with cross sabres, spears, &c., on the centre of which lays a shield, and on the face of the shield a helmet. The band at either end being a chased scroll and laurel wreath, (same as upper band.) The end mounting is fine a chased branch of oak leaves and acorns, encircled with chased and engraved scrolls, the whole being heavily gilded. The guard is formed similar in style to the regulation, but finely chased. The top of grip, the medallion head of Medusa, surmounted with a chased cap. The grip is of solid silver, bearing on the face side the laurel wreath and emblems of war. In the centre is a burnished shield, surmounted by a spread eagle. The shield bears the following inscription: "Presented to Col. D. W. Wardrop, by the Officers of the 99th Regiment, N. Y. S. V." The blade is of fine steel and handsomely etched.

The Postal Currency.—Great complaints are being made of the slowness with which the new postal currency is being issued by the Treasury Department It is only getting by driblets into circulation, and has done but little as yet to relieve the pressure for small change. Seeing the opportunity which it affords for the Government to get a loan of several millions without interest from the people, it is surprising that greater efforts have not been made to multiply the issues. There must surely be some mechanical means of increasing the number of impressions daily thrown off. The presses could at least be kept working day and night. The inconveniences to which the public are subjected by the high premium on silver and the want of a small paper currency of some kind, call for the straining of every effort on the part of the Department to hurry up its employes. Postage currency to the amount of about ten thousand dollars was given out yesterday morning at the Sub-Treasury, in sums of fifteen dollars to each individual. The supply was exhausted. No distribution will be made to-day. Public notice will be given when another lot of the currency is ready for issue

A Melancholy Accident.—A worthy young man, named Charles Hayes, aged 29 years—a resident of this City—came to a sad death, on Wednesday evening, under the following circumstances: The deceased, with quite a number of friends, male and female, was attending a social party at No. 562 Hudson-street. During the evening, they all engaged in social games, and for the purpose of carrying out the plot of one of them, it was deemed advisable by some of the party to put the deceased and several other gentlemen of the company, in the front parlor, while the rest retired to an adjoining room. The parlors were situated on the second floor, and they being locked in, determined, in a playful way, to escape from their imprisonment, and surprise the ladies. They accordingly raised the front window and three of them slid down, by means of the awning below. Mr. Hayes was the last one to descend. By some mishap, just as he let go his hold from the window, he slipped and fell to the sidewalk, and was instantly killed. Coroner Wildey held an inquest upon the body.

Coroners' Inquests—Fatal Accident to a Somnambulist.—An inquest was held yesterday, by Coroner Collin, upon the body of Wm. Barkridge, a native of Ireland, aged 36 years, who was accidentally killed, on Wednesday night, by falling from the third-story window of a house on the corner of Forty-fifth-street and First-avenue, while in a somnambulic state. It appears that the deceased was in the habit of walking about in his sleep, and in the middle of the night some of the occupants of the house heard the window raised, and a noise as if something were thrown out, but not suspecting anything wrong, no attention was paid to it. The next morning the deceased was missed, and upon examining the rear yard the unfortunate man was found in an insensible condition, with his skull fractured, and otherwise so much injured that he died soon afterwards. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the above facts. ....An inquest was held by Coroner Collin upon the body of an Italian lad, named Gerbelin Cuconive, who fell from the third-story window of house No. 82½ Charlton-street to the sidewalk, yesterday morning, and was instantly killed.

Departure of the United States Steamer Massachusetts.—The United States dispatch steamer Massachusetts, sailed from this port, yesterday, for the blockade fleet, with instructions to stop at Port Royal. She had on board a very large cargo of stores and provisions, and a few passengers. The Massachusetts will bring back a mail from all the vessels of the South Atlantic blockading squadron, together with the sick and wounded. The same officers are attached to her as when published, Capt. Cooper still commanding. Official dispatches from Secretary Welles went out in her.

Union Mass Meeting at Mozart Garden.—The large German Garden (well-known as named above) in Lewis-street was thronged with citizens of the Eleventh and Seventeenth Wards, on Wednesday evening, who assembled responsive to a call addressed to all friends of "The Union." Justice Sutton was unanimously voted to the Chair. Mr. Norton made an earnest appeal for recruits, which, whatever its result in men, was certainly productive of applause. Mr. Chauncey Shaffer made a rollicking speech, full of fun and anecdote, personal reminiscences and personal jokes, and left the stage, as he appeared on it, amid hearty cheering. The people seemed delighted.

Union Meeting.—To-night, at the Union Hotel corner of Ninth-avenue and Twenty-third-street, the Sixteenth Ward Union Association will have a rousing meeting. Everybody is invited to attend.

Presentation to Capt. Lee.—Capt. Lee, of the Third Metropolitan Regiment, was last evening presented with an elegant sword—the gift of his friends and associates in the United States Marshal's office where he was late deputy. The presentation took place at the residence of Deputy-Marshal Thompson and was attended by the officials connected with the Marshal's and District Attorney's offices, and by numerous invited guests. Those who know Capt. Lee need not be told that the weapon will be wielded by as gallant and patriotic an officer as is to be found in our volunteer service.

Democratic Organizations.—In nearly every Ward measures are on foot for the speedy opening of the Democratic Fall campaign. The Eleventh Ward Club is officered by Edward Jackman, Chairman, and Maurice O'Meara, Secretary, the Sixteenth Ward by Anson Willis, Chairman, and James Anderson, Secretary; the Nineteenth Ward by Thos. K. Downing, President, and Messrs. Macdonough, Mc-Manus and Allcock, Secretaries, and the Twentieth Ward holds a meeting to-night for the election of permanent officers.

Meeting of Fruit-Growers.—The weekly meeting of fruit-growers yesterday, at the office of the American Agriculturist, No. 41 Park-row, was largely attended and unusually interesting. Several samples of fruit were exhibited from the American Pomological Society, which has just closed its biennial session at Boston. The discussion was principally upon pears, their season of ripening and their healthfulness. It was the opinion of the best-informed pomologists that pears were equally healthful as an article of diet with apples, provided they were fully ripe when eaten. Some fine samples of grapes were exhibited, among which the "Concord" variety, by common consent bore off the palm.

Prize Money.—It is a general misapprehension that prize moneys are not to be paid until the end of the war. The Department has completed the prize rolls for the following vessels, and the prize money is now ready for payment, viz.: Steamer Union, for capture of the Hattie Jackson; Quaco, for capture of the President and Eugenia. The delay in making out the prize rolls for the present war is caused by the Department not having received full returns of sales and expenses.

Returning Wanderers—Dramatic Readings.—Among recent arrivals from seclusion of Summer haunts are the distinguished elocutionists, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Vandenhoff. Per advertisement, it will be seen that their regular readings commence early in October. Mrs. Vandenhoff gave yesterday a private reading of a very delightful character, promising much in the way of choice selections for the ensuing season.

Award of the Government Coffee Contract.—The Government contract for regularly burnt and ground Rio coffee, for army use, has been awarded to Messrs. Arbuckle, Ryan & Co., of this City, at 20 cents per pound, in packages containing 100 pounds, at 847 70, per 100 pounds.

Lectures on Gunshot Wounds.—Prof. Rapall will commence a course of lectures on gunshot wounds, at the New-York Medical College, No. 66 East Thirteenth-street, to-day at 12 o'clock.

Fire in a Carriage Manufactory.—About 7½ o'clock on Wednesday evening, a fire occurred in the carriage manufactory of Jacob Sebastian, in Third-avenue, near Forty-seventh-street. The total loss upon stock and fixtures will amount to about $5,000. Fully insured in City companies.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

Brooklyn Horticultural Society Exhibition.—This exhibition virtually closed last evening, which was the last occasion on which the flowers and fruit were shown. The opportunity has been chosen by those having rare fruits and flowers to submit to public inspection, and never before has the exhibition closed so prosperously. Numerous accessions have been made to the list of members, and many valuable additions have been made to the stock of floral and pomological productions. Over fifteen thousand persons have visited the Academy during the exhibition, and many have been the compliments which the patient floriculturists and nurserymen have received as a reward for their toil and care. Gentlemen who have visited similar exhibitions in Europe, have expressed their astonishment at the perfection to which the culture of these works of nature has been brought. This evening the entertainment will consist of a grand promenade concert in aid of the widows and orphans of deceased soldiers. No charity is more deserving of public patronage, and none should be more liberally supported. The Academy will be profusely and elegantly decorated. The chief ornament will be a magnificent floral temple, forty feet in height, which will be wreathed with flowers, and filled with baskets of the choicest fruit. This will be placed in the centre of the floor. A floral arch will be thrown across the entrance to the promenade floor, while the galleries will be festooned with wreaths of evergreens entwined with flowers. Over the stage American flags will be festooned. The Seventh Regiment Band will be in attendance.

Brooklyn Military Matters.—Arrangements are now in progress for the consolidation of the Third and Fourth Regiments of the Empire Brigade into one regiment. Both regiments have now between 400 and 500 men. The Second Regiment and the one thus consolidated are expected to leave for the seat of war soon. The Fourth Metropolitan Regiment, Col. Monzen, has now over 650 men enrolled, and is rapidly recruiting. It is understood that the Third Senatorial Regiment will be consolidated with some other incomplete organization. The Thirteenth Regiment N. Y. S. M. have not yet been paid for their three months' service, which deters many of the men from joining regiments now forming, who would otherwise do so. This evening an earnest effort is to be made at a public meeting, to be held at the Washington-street M. E. Church, to fill up the ranks of the Fourteenth Regiment, N. Y. S. M., which has performed such arduous duty at the seat of war. The people of Brooklyn feel a just pride in this regiment, which is emphatically a Brooklyn organization, and especial efforts are to be made to fill its ranks to the proper standard. Speeches will be made at the meeting by Hon. M. F. Odell, James Humphrey, Rev. J. C. Foss, Rev. Levi Ward and others.

NEW-JERSEY.

Suicide.—A locksmith named Geo. R. Britzel, doing business at No. 85 Railroad-avenue, Jersey City, committed suicide Wednesday, by cutting his throat at his residence, No. 196 Grove-street. Deceased severed the jugular vein with a razor, and stood up, with the blood streaming into a pail, until he fell to the floor from weakness, which was the first intimation the family had of the occurrence. Physicians were called in, but their aid was unavailing. Deceased has made several ineffectual attempts upon his life, by poison, drowning, and cutting his throat.

Are United States Securities Liable to State Taxation?—The Exemption Act.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Barnard and Clerke.

The People ex rel. The Merchants' Bank and Fourteen other Banks in the City of New-York vs. The Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments, &c.—The Merchants' Bank is a Banking Association organized under the general banking law of this State, with a capital of two millions seven hundred and seventy-six thousand seven hundred and seventy-five dollars; out of which it has paid $165,000 for real estate, upon which its banking house stands; $30,275 in amount is held by literary and charitable institutions; the balance of its capital is $2,561,500. Out of this balance it invested the Revolvers' Bank invested in Treasury Notes and stocks or bonds of the Federal Government the sum of $1,161,000, prior to the 20th day of March, 1862, and a further sum after that day, making an aggregate amount of more than $2,000,000, which notes and stocks or bonds have been since owned and held by said Bank. On that day, the Bank presented to said Commissioners a verified statement of its lands and personal property. They thereupon decided that it should be assessed, in respect to its personal estate, the sum of $2,561,500,—and entered such assessment on the books provided for that purpose. This sum embraced the notes, stocks, and bonds of the Federal Government owned and held by the Bank. Application was made on its behalf to said Commissioners to reduce such assessment to $800,500, which they refused to do, and thereupon a certiorari to the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments was allowed under the twentieth section of the act of 1859, in relation to taxes, &c., in the City of New-York, upon the application of the Merchants' Bank, for the purpose of reviewing their action in the assessment of that Bank, in the year 1862.

On the relator's petition, the certiorari, and the Commissioner's return, the argument was brought on before the General Term.

The various banks contended that the Tax Commissioners erred in assessing them for that part of their capital stock which had been invested in, and consisted of, the notes and stocks or bonds of the United States; and their proceeding should be corrected. That a bank is not liable to taxation, in respect to that portion of its capital which is invested in the securities of the Federal Government.

(1.) That species of property is expressly exempted from taxation by the general law of this State, which enacted that "all lands and all personal estate, &c., whether owned by individuals or corporations, shall be liable to taxation, subject," &c., expressly excepting from taxation all property, real or personal, whoever may be its owner, which has been "exempted from taxation under the Constitution of the United States." (1 Rev. Stat., 387-8, sec. 1-4.)

(2.) By an act of Congress, entitled "An Act to authorize the issue of United States notes, and for the redemption or funding thereof, and for funding the floating debt of the United States," passed February 25, 1862, it was declared that all stocks, bonds, and other securities of the United States held by individuals, corporations, or associations within the United States, shall be exempt from taxation by or under State authority." (U. S. Statutes at Large, 1862, p. 345.)

That act is declared by the Federal Constitution to be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges of every State are bound thereby, "anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

The United States Treasury notes and bonds were issued by the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority of that act of Congress. They are not taxable property by any State authority; and they constitute that part of the capital stock of a bank possessing them which, by the third section of the Act of 1857, the Tax Commissioners are required not to include in the assessed valuation of its personal property, but to deduct from the actual value of its "capital stock" in making up their assessments. (23 N. Y. Rep., 195.)

(3.) Before the act of February 25, 1862, was passed, the Supreme Court of the United States had decided that the stocks and bonds of the United States were, under the Federal Constitution, exempt from taxation by State authority—upon the ground that they were the means employed by Congress in the exercise of an express grant of power to it, "to borrow money upon the credit of the United States." (4 Wheaton Rep. 116. 9 Wheaton Rep. 738. 2 Peters Rep. 449.)

The relator further contends that the assessment of the Merchants' Bank, though claimed by the Tax Commissioners to have been made upon its capital stock eo nomine, was, in fact, to the extent of $1,761,000, made upon the public stocks or bonds of the United States, in which so much of its capital had been invested.

Under the tax laws of this State an assessment upon the capital stock of this bank, invested wholly or in part in the stocks of the Federal Government, is an assessment upon these securities per se.

The term "capital stock," in the 3d section of the act of April 15, 1857, in legal sense, means the securities constituting such capital—property only, whether owned by individuals or corporations, being the subject of taxation. (23 N. Y. Rep., 195.)

An assessment upon the capital stock of this bank could not have been made irrespective of the stocks or bonds of the United States in which part of it was invested.

Their worth alone determined its actual value to the extent of its investment in them; and the law imposed upon the Tax Commissioners the duty in making up their assessment roll, of ascertaining the value of such securities, and whether they were exempt from taxation. (Laws of 1859, p. 680, sec. 7; 23 N. Y. Rep., 195.)

"Our laws of assessment contain no specification of the subjects of taxation. They provide for the valuation of the estate of the taxpayer in mass, of whatever it may consist;" but if he owns anything which is exempted by law, its value must be deducted from the value of the mass. (23 N. Y. Rep., 213, 195.)

The relators also contend that they were not at the time this assessment was made, subject to assessment and taxation upon the value of the capital stock, without regard to the fact that a portion of such capital stock had been invested in the public stocks, debts, or bonds of the United States; and that the action of the Tax Commissioners in the assessment of this bank, is in direct antagonism with the act of Congress passed February 25, 1862, exempting the bonds and stocks of the United States from taxation by State authority, and the Court is asked to give a construction to the laws of this State which will sustain such action.

On behalf of the Commissioners, the Counsel for the Corporation contended that Congress cannot derive a power to pass an exempting act from the clause in the Constitution giving Congress the power "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper" for carrying into execution "the power to borrow money," &c. The tax in question is not imposed upon the stocks or bonds of the United States. It is imposed upon the estimated value of the "capital stock" of the bank. If banks or individuals happen to hold United States stocks or bonds, the tax so assessed is not upon the stocks or bonds, but upon the interest which the banks or citizens of the State may have in such stocks or bonds, in common with other property of similar description throughout the State. The tax is not a discriminating tax. The laws of this State permit no such tax. A tax upon United States Stock eo nomine has been declared invalid, as obstructing the Government in the use of means necessary for its support. But to charge all citizens of a State with contributing to the support of Government in proportion to the value of their property, without regard to the manner of its investment, cannot be regarded as an act of hostility to, or in any manner obstructing the General Government in the exercise of its powers, or interfering with, or imposing any burden upon, the means adopted for its support.

After very extended argument by counsel for the several banks, and by the Corporation Counsel, the Court took the points of the various relators, to render its decision at a future day.

Is the Mixing of Water with Milk an Adulteration—Unconstitutionality of a Law Without a Maximum Penalty.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Clerke and Barnard.

The People vs. Jacob Fancbeck.—The defendant was convicted of vending adulterated milk, and sentenced to pay a fine of $55, at the Court of Sessions. He appealed the case to this Court, contending that the act under which he was convicted was purely a sanitary measure, intended to prevent traffic in impure, diseased and unwholesome milk, and not to prevent fraud in the sale of diluted milk. That to put water into milk was not to corrupt it, according to dictionary definitions. Water was not a foreign admixture of milk, but its chief ingredient in its natural state, and it could not be adulterated by adding a little more.

The second point was that the act was unconstitutional, as it imposes a fine of not less than $50, without fixing the maximum, and consequently the Court could fine the party convicted $50,000 and the penalty would be according to law, and the party have to pay it or suffer the alternative—imprisonment for not less than 30 days. So that a fine might be imposed that the party could not pay, and he be sent to the State Prison for life for not paying it.

The respondent's counsel contended that to mix water with milk was an adulteration, and that the law was constitutional.

L. H. Stuart for appellant; A. Oakley Hall for the People.

Important Order in Prize—The Cheshire Bonded.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Judge Nelson.

The United States vs. The Ship Cheshire.—An application having been made on behalf of the claimant of this vessel to bond her, Judge Nelson ordered her to be delivered to the claimant on his paying the appraised value into Court. As this is the first case on appeal in which it has been done, we give the order entered in full, as follows:

On reading and filing affidavit on behalf of the claimant of the above vessel, and also notice of motion to bond, accompanied with a proposition to pay her value into Court if required, and after hearing Mr. Edwards for claimant, no one appearing to oppose, it is ordered that the said ship Cheshire, her tackle, apparel and furniture, be valued by Thomas Tillotson, Esq., of the City of New-York; that he be first sworn by the Clerk of this Court duly and properly to appraise said vessel; that the said claimant pay the fees of the appraiser, which is here fixed at $50. Also that, upon payment of such fees, and payment into Court of the amount of value to be so found by the said appraiser, the Marshal, on certificate of the Clerk of such payment, shall deliver up the said ship Cheshire, her tackle, apparel, boats and furniture to the claimant, or his agent or proctor, without fees or charges, taking receipt for the same, and such receipt to be filed in this Court with the papers in the cause.

Criminal Law—Character of the Victim, as Affecting the Trial of the Murderer.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Ingraham, Clerke and Barnard.

Albert Uhl, plaintiff in error, vs. The People, defendants in error.—The plaintiff in error was tried in the New-York General Sessions, upon an indictment for the murder of one Lee, on the 5th day of August, 1861. The prisoner was barkeeper for Louis Bleyert, at a liquor store, kept corner of Morris and West streets. The deceased, with several other persons, came to Bleyert's place, obtained liquor, and refused to pay. The deceased was in the act of striking the prisoner on the head with a large half-gallon pewter pitcher filled with water and ice, when prisoner shot him. It was proved on the trial that this pitcher was a deadly weapon. It was contended upon the trial that the prisoner acted in self-defence. Numerous exceptions were taken upon the trial. The counsel for the prisoner contends that the Court below erred in permitting the prosecution (the defence having given no evidence on the subject) to prove the good character of the deceased for peace and quietness, to which prisoner's counsel duly excepted; and also that the Court below erred in charging, "If you (the jury) find that the prisoner was justified in defending himself, and carried that protection further than was necessary for his defence, then he is guilty of manslaughter in some of the four degrees."

On these points the District-Attorney cited People vs. Shorter, 2 N. Y., 193, and People vs. Sanchez, 22 N. Y. 188.

The Court, after argument, took the papers and reserved decision.

Henry L. Clinton for the prisoner; A. Oakey Hall for the people.

The office of the United States Treasury in this City received to-day, on deposit at 4 ₱ cent. ₱ annum interest, $1,007,000, of which $847,000 is in Gold, under the notice issued by the Sub-Treasurer yesterday. This arrangement works admirably well, and will secure to the Department all the Gold required to pay the Public Interest at a very moderate rate of interest, without the purchase of a single dollar either in the open market or by private contract. We apprehend that after next week, when nearly three millions in Gold for October interest will be paid out by the Treasury, the difficulty will be to keep the current deposits at 4 ₱ cent

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We learn of no new movements in the army of the Potomac, though no official information is received. It is pretty certain that no portion of our forces under the immediate command of Gen. MCCLELLAN is on the Virginia side of the Potomac; and it is equally certain that the rebels have not left the line of the river. It is reported that they can be distinctly seen on the opposite side, both at Williamsport and at Falling Waters, at which latter point Gen. LEE's headquarters are located. It is believed that the rebels are operating injuriously on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

It is now well ascertained that the rebel losses at the Antietam much exceeded ours. Up to Sunday night three thousand rebel dead had been buried by our men, and it is known that the rebels themselves buried a large number previous to their retreat into Virginia. At last accounts between six and seven hundred dead remained on the field unburied. The rebels also left about five thousand of their wounded within our lines. Their total loss cannot be much less than five thousand killed and fifteen thousand wounded; while our loss is probably about twelve hundred killed, six thousand wounded, and eight hundred missing. A prominent member of Gen. MCCLELLAN'S Staff states that we have captured in the battles of Maryland thirty-five stand of colors, sixteen cannon, and between thirty-five and forty thousand stand of arms. Several thousand stand of arms still remain on the battle-field of Antietam, uncollected for want of time.

It has been semi-officially stated that our loss in the battle of Antietam was nine thousand two hundred and twenty killed, wounded and missing, and that the loss of the enemy, judging from the appearance of the battle-field and the number of their dead not buried, must have exceeded fifteen thousand.

A dispatch from Harrisburgh, corroborated by our Washington correspondent, states that a meeting of the loyal Governors, who were in conclave at Altoona on Wednesday, is to be held at the National capital, Gov. CURTIN having already gone there.

It will be seen by official reports which we publish this morning, that there has been some pretty severe skirmishing along the line of the Mississippi Central Railroad recently, in which the rebels were worsted. We also have accounts of the recent affair near Bolivar, Tenn., and of others, brief mention of which has already been made by telegraph. The report of the fight at Britton's Landing, in which eight hundred of our troops defeated five thousand rebels, is fully confirmed.

The following is an extract from a letter dated at Norfolk, Va., Sept. 20, and written by an officer of a New-York regiment: "I am detailed here at Gen. VEILE'S headquarters on special duty. My regiment is now on the march for Richmond, which you will hear from soon."

A Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal mentions a rumor that the President was induced to issue his Emancipation Proclamation, because he had information that unless he did so JEFF. DAVIS would forestall him.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Episcopal Convention of the Diocese of New-York yesterday transacted a large amount of routine business. The Standing and Missionary Committees were elected, and a very important debate took place on the all-absorbing question among Episcopalians in this State of the division of the Diocese of New-York. No decision was arrived at. The question on the reports will be taken this morning.

The great Jewish Festival severally known as the Rosh Hashona, or New-Year, the Feast of Trumpets, and the Jom Haddin, or Judgment Day, and by the most learned writers also claimed as the anniversary of ADAM'S birth, was observed yesterday by all the synagogues in this City, with extreme solemnity. The prayers of penitence; the ceremony of the blowing of the ram's horn; the chanting of hymns and solemn discourses by the respective Rabbin, were all repeated with great fervor by throngs of worshipers at every synagogue. The New-Year's Festival proper, terminates to-night, to be followed on the tenth day by the Feast of Atonement, and on the fifteenth by the Feast of Tabernacles.

The Westchester County Annual Agricultural Fair terminated yesterday after a quite successful exhibition, particularly of horses. The other departments were not so extensive, although in fruits and flowers there was a creditable show. Attendance on the last two days was very large, and the race-track was constantly alive with splendid teams. At 3 P. M. yesterday an interesting address was delivered by Hon. A. B. CONGER, Ex-Senator from Rockland County, and after reading the premiums the Committee, in the name of the Society, adjourned the Fair. The place of exhibition for next year will be duly announced.

Some idea of the amount of ammunition required to supply an army such as Gen. MCCLELLAN'S, during a heavy fight like that of Wednesday, may be gained from the fact that thirty-eight (38) tons of ammunition were forwarded to Gen. MCCLELLAN on Wednesday, from Washington, via Baltimore, Harrisburgh and Hagerstown. An eyewitness of the battle states that he counted at four different times during the day, the number of discharges from our artillery, and found that they were made at the rate of 78 to the minute.

Lieut.-Col. GWYNN, of the Philadelphia Corn Exchange Regiment, in a brief letter detailing the disastrous action in which that Corps was recently engaged, states that it took 740 men into action and brought out but 407.

The reports received at the State House in Boston, from the various completed camps in different portions of Massachusetts, show that about 9,500 enlisted men had been received at these encampments on the 22d inst. Beside the number already in camp, it is estimated that upward of four thousand recruits are now ready, in the towns, to proceed to the appointed rendezvous, when the military depôts, now preparing, shall be in a fit state for occupation.

The appraised value of the steamers Florida and Lodona was paid on Wednesday by the agent of the Navy Department, and the vessels were transferred to the Government. The amount paid was $120,000.

The New Ironsides left the breakwater below Philadelphia for Fortress Monroe, on Wednesday.

Some excitement has been caused in Philadelphia by a number of deaths, which resulted from malignant fever, exactly of what type is not stated. It is supposed to have originated from certain bags containing fruit, which had been brought from the West Indies. Six deaths have been traced to this cause.

Rev. ABRAM PRYNE, Member of Assembly from Wayne County, and prominent as an Abolitionist, committed suicide on Saturday morning last by cutting his throat with a razor. He had been confined to his bed with fever for several days, and was unquestionably delirious when he committed the act.

At General Term of the Supreme Court, yesterday, one of the "adulterated milk" cases was argued upon appeal from a conviction and sentence at the Sessions, to pay a fine of $50. Decision was reserved. The case of UHL, convicted of the murder of one LEE, at the General Sessions, was also argued, and decision reserved.

There was increased excitement in the Stock Market yesterday, with a further rise of 1@2 ℘ cent. in the prices of the Railway Stocks. Gold also advanced to 120¼, closing at 120 ℘ cent. Exchange 131½@132 ℘ cent.

The rise in Gold and Exchange yesterday, encouraged export buyers to purchase Breadstuffs freely, and prices of Flour and Wheat were firmer. Hemp was unusually active and decidedly dearer. A fair business was transacted in Sugars, Whisky, Provisions, Hay and Tallow, at generally buoyant rates. Coffee, Cotton and Molasses were less active. The Freight market was somewhat brisker.

The State Canvass.

The State canvas is fairly opened, and according to all appearances it bids fair to be one of the most hotly contested which we have ever known. The spirit and temper of the Syracuse Convention indicated a purpose, on the part of the War Unionists of all political parties, who were there represented, to join issue directly with the peace and submission Democrats, and to give them as sharp a fight as they may desire.

Gen. WADSWORTH, their candidate for Governor, is a thoroughly representative man,—devoted heart, soul, and fortune to the crushing of the rebellion, and not disposed to make terms of any sort with traitors in arms. Unlike Gov. SEYMOUR, he has nothing but blows for rebels, and gives the Government of his country a hearty and unqualified support. He is widely known as an able, generous, liberal man, perfectly independent in feeling as in fortune, and deserving the universal confidence and esteem which he enjoys. LYMAN TREMAIN, the candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, is fresh from the ranks of the Democratic Party, a lawyer of ability, and a man of commanding influence and popularity through a very large section of the State.

The Convention was large, able, perfectly harmonious, and intensely enthusiastic in support of the Government, and especially in approval of the President's proclamation emancipating the slaves of obdurate rebels. A portion of the delegates deemed it expedient to nominate Gen. DIX, in order to give the loyal Democrats an opportunity to stand by the Government without forfeiting their party preferences. With this exception, there was not the slightest difference of opinion as to principles or policy in the Convention,—and when a very large majority of the delegates overruled this suggestion, nothing was left but the most complete and unanimous enthusiasm in support of the ticket and the cause.

The canvass opens in a manner to give assurance that we shall crush out treason at home as effectually as we hope to crush the more open and manly rebellion beyond our borders.

Evolutions in Kentucky.

The situation in Kentucky derived many of its recent alarming features from the excitable temper and incapacity of Gen. NELSON, at Louisville, as we took occasion at the time to show. On a report, evidently quite vague in its character, that Gen. BRAGG was "marching rapidly upon Louisville," having eluded Gen. BUELL, Gen. NELSON indulged in a series of frantic orders and proclamations in regard to closing all business houses, sending off women and children, seizing ferries for military purposes, and so forth. Samson in Delilah's lap was not startled to more sudden activity by the cry that the Philistines were upon him, than was the valiant military commandant of Louisville, by the alleged advance of BRAGG. But, unfortunately, at this point, the parallel runs out. NELSON had no withes or cords to break—he only broke the bubble of his own reputation.

It does not yet appear that BRAGG is "marching on Louisville" at all—although three days have passed since Gen. NELSON warned the women and children of the city to be ready for the rebel shells. But on the contrary, Gen. BUELL, whom BRAGG was said to have "eluded," and who was "several hours behind," singularly enough turns up in Louisville ahead of BRAGG—and with BUELL, the major part of his army! It becomes now a question whether the informant that set NELSON so wild did not mistake the approach of BUELL'S army for BRAGG'S. Certain it is, there has been a wonderful obfuscation of the military mind at Louisville somehow. BUELL has reached that city. The happy people neither ask nor care how he got there. If he moved "slow" he beat BRAGG amazingly. They had no hope of ever seeing him in the flesh, and if he had claimed to have dropped from the clouds he would have found believers.

But now the question arises, and it is a deeply interesting one, Where is Gen. BRAGG? That he was at Glasgow is certain—that he was at Munfordsville is probable. But when he was said to be advancing on Louisville from Munfordsville, BUELL was known to be at Bowling Green, considerably in his rear. But now BUELL is at Louisville, and BRAGG is not. Why? We gave ample reason in our first notice of the Louisville fright and the military fiasco there. He knew that he would be opposed vigorously at Louisville, because it was fortified partially and there was quite a considerable army there; and that while he besieged Louisville nothing could keep BUELL from coming up and attacking him in the rear. And then he would be destroyed.

Looking at the matter in this light BRAGG appears to have taken counsel of prudence, and hauled off of the highway to Louisville. BUELL has effected a junction with the forces at Louisville, and now undoubtedly wields an army 80,000 strong at least. If BRAGG is not already on a rapid run out of the State of Kentucky, we opine he soon will be.

Attitude of France in Mexico—A Chance for Southern Recognition.

The intelligence brought by the last arrival from Europe, which appeared in the letter of our well-informed Paris correspondent, regarding the proposed movements of France in Mexico, is of the highest importance. It appears, that at a recent Cabinet council, the French Government came to the decision to increase its army of occupation in Mexico from 30,000 to 80,000 men, and that arrangements, looking to the permanent stay of those forces in Mexico, were resolved upon. We are also informed that the Emperor has decided to immediately enter upon the construction, as a military necessity, of the railroad from Vera Cruz to the Capital, and that surveys of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec have been ordered, preparatory to the opening, under French control, of that most important American route of interoceanic communication.

To say nothing of the dangerous barrier which the military occupation for commercial purposes of Mexico by France will set up to all future expansion of our commerce in that direction—an expansion so long and so hopefully looked forward to by our commercial interest—the bare announcement in ordinary times of projects looking to the control of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and of routes of communication into the interior, and across Mexico, by a leading European Power, would have been sufficient to throw our whole country into excitement. But in our intense preoccupation at home, all this now passes for naught.

There is, however, an aspect of the question presented in this foreign news, which calls for immediate attention, and is of grave importance with reference to our pending struggle with the South. It is this, Why is France sending this large force into Mexico? And does it portend a recognition of the South.

There are those who believe, and evidence leading to a belief in the correctness of the assumption is fast increasing, that arrangements have long been in progress between the leaders in this French intervention and the managers of the rebellion in the South, and in which the interests of both parties are fully harmonized, which contemplate the early establishment in Mexico, under the auspices and by the presence of an overwhelming French force, of a new Government, which, while perhaps not even recognized by France, at least openly, shall recognize the South and enter into treaties of alliance offensive and defensive with it. This to be done while France, still continuing to hold the Gulf and Pacific Coasts under pretence of yet unliquidated claims, shall thus effectively, though not apparently, interpose a barrier to any attempt on our part, by a blockade of either coast, to close the commerce that would thus be opened. As well in Mexico as in Rome such occupation could continue without involving France in any direct responsibility for the acts of the Government in the interior, although the very existence of such Government would depend upon the presence of the French arms.

A recognition of the South by a Government contiguous to its territory, would be vastly more dangerous to us than any other, because, while directly beneficial to the South, we should be powerless to check communication and a growing commerce, except by a war of invasion upon Mexico, conducted solely from the land approach, and which is equivalent to a movement across two thousand miles of desert waste. Open access for Southern commerce into the interior of Mexico would therefore be afforded, while that commerce would find an exterior outlet through the Mexican ports held by the French.

The secret object of the movers of the French intervention, as has been frequently set forth in these columns, is to set up some Government in the place of the Constitutional Government in Mexico, which shall recognize as valid the $52,000,000 of Jecker and Peza Bonds issued by ZULOAZA and MIRAMON, during their attempt, under the auspices of the Church, to overthrow the Constitutional régime. These bonds are largely held by influential parties about the French court, and their interest lies wholly in the permanent occupation of Mexico by France.

The Emperor, as is well known, has long coveted the resources that might be derived from the rich silver mines of Sonora and the table lands of Mexico, and has been ambitious to acquire the glory of giving order to so rich and yet unfortunate a country, and of securing its vast agricultural and commercial resources for the benefit of France. These possessions, however, France cannot acquire without the permanency of the disruption of the United States. Their price must be, if necessary, the recognition of the South, and perhaps even a war with the North in its behalf. Any means, however, short of a direct rupture will doubtless be preferred.

On the other hand, the South, knowing it cannot itself acquire Mexico—the world would not permit such an extension of the area of Slavery—and desiring to keep it from the North, would gladly agree to its occupation by a friendly and despotic Power like France, rather than see its continuance as a free Republic, an asylum for fugitive slaves, and a sympathetic friend and possible ally of the North.

By the erection, therefore, of a new and independent Government, actually, though, perhaps, not openly, under the auspices of the French, in the interior of Mexico, while France shall continue to hold both coasts, which Government shall recognize the independence of the South, and enter into treaties of alliance, offensive and defensive with it, all the elements in this varied programme would be satisfied. Such recognition may not be long delayed, unless the rebellion is speedily crushed, or some barrier is interposed between the territory of the South and Mexico by the immediate occupation of the whole or the western half of Texas. The subject certainly deserves the serious and immediate attention of the Government.

The Rebel Currency.

A further issue of Treasury notes having, on the 19th inst., been authorized by the rebel Congress, as a means of carrying on the war and replenishing their exhausted exchequer, it may be of some interest to review the present condition of the Southern currency, and to compare it with that existing in the peaceful and prosperous year preceding the rebellion.

In 1860 the currency of the Southern States was in a very sound condition, and amounted to about $160,000,000, half of which consisted of bank notes and half of specie. After the fall of Fort Sumter gold began to disappear from circulation in the South, and the banks, yielding to the pressure for currency, increased their issues, which at present are estimated at over $100,000,000.

On the 9th March, 1861, the first issue of the Confederate Treasury notes was inaugurated by an act of the rebel Congress. The sum was small, amounting only to $2,021,100. One month later, on the 17th April, a further issue took place. It consisted of Interest Notes, of which $22,799,900 have been emitted. Apparently, however, from the coupons attached, or from some other cause, this batch of notes, being unfit for currency, were not very popular, nor were they absorbed with sufficient rapidity. Hence on the 16th May, another issue was made of ordinary Treasury notes, amounting to $17,347,955. Up to this time little or no depreciation seems to have taken place. But on the 19th August a much larger emission of notes was determined on, which at once deranged the currency, the amount sent forth being no less than $167,764,615. Besides these four issues of paper money, a quantity of one and two dollar Confederate notes was struck off, amounting to $846,000.

From these figures, we see that at the present time the aggregate amount of Confederate notes in circulation is $210,779,560, and the whole of the paper money in the South, inclusive of bank notes, reaches three hundred and ten million of dollars.

Thus the stream of the circulation in the rebel States is swollen to nearly double its normal dimensions, while it is depreciated to one-half of its nominal value by the sure action of that relentless law which governs all paper currency.

This law is one of the most important in the science of national finance. The honor of its discovery has, by some of our perhaps too partial countrymen, been claimed for JOHN ADAMS, who, eighty years ago, thus expounded it. The amount of ordinary commerce, "external" and internal, of a country may be computed at a fixed sum. A certain sum of money is necessary to circulate among the society in order to carry on their business. This precise sum is discoverable by calculation, and reducible to certainty. You may emit paper or any other currency for this purpose until you reach this rule and it will not depreciate. After you exceed this rule it will depreciate, and no power or act of legislation hitherto invented can prevent it. In the case of paper, if you go on emitting forever, the whole mass will be worth no more than that was which was emitted within the rule. Had Mr. ADAMS foreseen the past fluctuations and actual position of the rebel currency, he could not more truly have described them. For we have first the issue of $100 of paper money for every $50 that are needed; and, secondly, as the inevitable consequence, the depreciation of this money till $100 of paper are only worth $50 of specie. It was in accordance with this same law that in Europe the paper money of England became depreciated 20 per cent. in 1812, 23 per cent. in 1813, and 25 per cent. in 1814, while in this country the 200 millions of Continental money, issued from 1775 to 1779, brought exactly $36,367,719 into the Treasury of our infant Republic.

In view of these facts, we can easily trace out the effects of the new issue of Treasury notes by the rebel authorities. Further depreciation is inevitable, with all its attendant disasters, disappointments, and wide-spread misery. It is as if, by a sickening and unheard-of refinement of Roman cruelty, a gladiator, worn to a skeleton by starvation, were to be bled to fainting, and then condemned to meet a foe with whom the full energy of his most robust strength was too weak to cope.

THE CONCLAVE OF GOVERNORS AT ALTOONA.—The meeting of certain Governors on one of the mountain tops of Pennsylvania has excited much attention, and provoked in some quarters the most violent condemnation. Charges of secret conspiracy to overthrow the National Government have been freely offered by the sensational Press; while the most moderate view of the Press at large has been that measures unpalatable to the Administration were there to be rolled into pellets and forced down its reluctant throat. There was no ground, however, for any such apprehensions. That the meeting was probably ill-advised, and in all respects unfortunate, can hardly be doubted. There was too striking a resemblance between it and similar gatherings of State Right Governors in the South just before the rebellion broke out; and, indeed, the substance as well as the form of the thing smacked unpleasantly of that violent Anti-National creed which has set this hapless people by the ears. It must also occur to the most casual thinker that one of the blessings of our Constitution is that it furnishes the President with authentic advisers in the shape of a Senate and House of Representatives, who could be called to the council board at once if the emergency required it, and whose regular annual meeting is at worst only a few weeks off. For these reasons, it might seem safe to omit, at this moment, any irregular and officious tenders of advice.

But, with these exceptions, the gathering of the Governors was not utterly unpardonable. They have done or resolved nothing revolutionary; and, if they had, they would simply have exceeded their commissions, thereby becoming responsible in no pleasant wise to their constituents, and approaching the National Executive with no popular weight to balance their individual opinions. It is Mr. ANDREWS, or SPRAGUE, or WASHBURNE who speaks; the Governor is no Governor out of his State, or beyond the warrant of his office, or without the support of the people who placed him in it. To discuss the action these gentlemen took, or proposed to take, is not the business of the moment. It is enough to know that the whole affair was absurd, imprudent and reprehensible, but that it is also quite harmless.

Harbor Defences—Ships Against Forts on Land.

While agitating the subject of national defences, let us not be blinded by so strong an admiration for our iron navy as to believe it a panacea for every evil. We shall fall into a fatal error when we trust to ships, gunboats, or floating batteries alone, for the defence of our harbors or seacoast. All writers on military art agree on one point, that a land battery is in every way superior to one that floats. While the latter has to contend with an uncontrollable element, affecting the use of its guns, the precision of their aim, and the safety of its men from numberless causes, the first can fire from a firm foundation with a certainty of aim, and with a protection to its men that cannot be rated at less than ten to one. We will pass by the wooden ships in our calculation, and enter only upon those of iron, and yet not fail to see that vulnerable points are presented upon everything that floats, no matter how carefully constructed, that utterly outnumber the weak points of the weakest of our old stone fortifications.

The growing belief in Monitors and gunboats for harbor defence may be somewhat abated, if we look a little into the history of the last half century, and examine the records where ships have been brought to bear against land batteries.

In 1794 the Fortitude, 74, and the Juno, 32, attacked the town of Martello, in Corsica, which was defended by one gun in barbette and a garrison of thirty men. After a fight of two and a half hours the ships were obliged to retire disabled. The tower was unharmed and its garrison without injury.

In 1797 NELSON, with eight vessels and 400 guns, attacked the wretched batteries of Santa Cruz, in Teneriffe, and was defeated with terrible loss, a single ball instantly sinking one of his ships and carrying down a hundred men.

In 1789 the French attacked an English work on the Island of Marcon with a force of 52 sail and 7,000 men. The garrison consisted of 250 men, defended by ten pieces, ranging from four to thirty-two pounds. The French were defeated with great loss, while the garrison had only one man killed and three wounded.

In 1801 an English fleet, carrying 502 guns, attacked the Spanish and French defences of Algesiras. Though the English had seventeen guns to every one of their opponents, yet they were defeated with immense slaughter.

In 1803 the English garrison at Port Royal Bay, with 100 men and 15 guns, beat off a French attack of two seventy-fours, a frigate and a brig, assisted by a land force of two hundred men.

In 1806 the English, with 150 guns and 1300 men, attacked a French battery on Cape Licasa of two guns and garrisoned by twenty-five men. The loss of the English was thirty-seven men and one 80-gun ship, while the fort and battery were entirely uninjured.

In 1814, when the English advanced against Antwerp, they established a small battery of two guns at the Polder Dyke. A French 80-gun ship, attempting to dislodge them, anchored within six hundred yards. The result was, that after a combat of five hours, the ship withdrew disabled, with a loss of 41 men, among whom was her commander.

To come nearer home with like instances, we will cite the attack of Sir PETER PARKER upon FORT MOULTRIE, Charleston, in 1776, with a fleet of nine vessels, carrying 270 guns. Moultrie was armed with 26 guns, and garrisoned by about 450 regulars and militia. The result was the total defeat of the British, with a loss of 205 men, while the fort lost but 32.

In 1814, a British fleet of four vessels, with 92 guns, and a land force of 730 men, supported by a battery of two guns, attacked Fort Boyer, at the entrance to the bay of Mobile. The garrison consisted of 120 men, with 20 short carronades. The enemy were repulsed with a loss of 85 men and one of their largest ships.

In 1814, a battery of one 4-pounder and one 18-pounder repulsed a British fleet of 134 guns, with a loss of 70 men, while the garrison lost only eight.

The attack on Baltimore in 1814 was conducted by 40 vessels, carrying 6,000 men, but was obliged to retire from Fort McHenry with great loss, after a bombardment of 25 hours.

In 1815 a British fleet ascended the Mississippi to reduce Fort St. Philip, a small work of twenty guns, but was obliged to retire with heavy loss after nine days' fighting.

In the war of 1812 there was but one instance of the reduction of a fort, which was that of Fort Washington by the fleet that ascended the Potomac to burn Washington City. This work was deserted by its garrison on the first British fire, and the commander was immediately dismissed the service for his cowardice.

The only victories that have ever been claimed for ships over forts are those of Copenhagen in 1801, Constantinople in 1807, Algiers in 1816, San Juan d'Ulloa in 1838, and St. Jean d'Acre in 1840; each of which if examined in detail will prove to be no victories. The first was an action against ships, the second a disgraceful retreat, the third was ended by negotiation at the moment the attacking party was exhausted and afraid to renew the contest, the fourth a surrender in consequence of the explosion of the magazine and the consequent terror of the garrison, and the loss of nineteen of their most effective guns. The fifth, that of St. Jean d'Acre, was decided from the same cause more terribly expressed, the magazine having exploded with 6,000 casks of powder, destroying a space of 60,000 yards, and killing over a thousand of the garrison.

Having cited these instances to show that in the experience of the past stone walls have never given way to wooden walls, we can still give a broad margin to the advance of artillery, and admit that Parrott guns and Columbiads may do what long 32-pounders cannot, and yet have a balance in favor of the land battery armed the same as that which floats. The finished and projected works of New-York Harbor are intended for 1,000 guns. If this armament is of the right metal and properly served, no fleet which the world combined can produce, can withstand it long enough to do the City any serious damage. The idea of landing an attacking force anywhere upon our shores, is simply an absurdity; any harm that can be offered us by a hostile nation must be by destroying our shipping at sea, or by an attack upon our cities. In defending the first, our new-made iron navy will have work enough; for repelling the last, the fortifications of all our cities are thoroughly efficient if they have but the proper armament. It is to this end we must look for harbor defences—not to iron ships, gunboats, or floating batteries.

A CREDIT THAT IS MERELY INCREDIBLE.—The difficulty of solving American paradoxes must be more firmly impressed upon our foreign critics at each new arrival from this country. Of these anomalies, the most puzzling is the [illegible] has it not yielded to the financial strain of a year and a half? How is it possible the Treasury has only to invite the contributions of the people to get them in excess of its demands; and this, in the face of every political discouragement? The thing outrages all probability. And yet the next steamer will carry out word that the Government has only had to ask for the gold of the country, offering for it certificates of deposit and a trifling interest, to give new value to the metal, and cause a million dollars to seek Government custody in a single day. What Government of Europe at peace, and in the emjoyment of the broadest prosperity, has an equal hold upon the confidence of its subjects?

A POLICY AT LAST.—The President's proclamation, suspending the writ of habeas corpus in certain cases, excites quite as much disgust in the minds of the opponents of the Administration as did the Proclamation of Emancipation. The latter was pronounced objectionable because immediately impracticable, and as tending to provoke the augmented animosity of the South. The former is represented to be a return of the Administration to the policy of restricted speech and summary imprisonment, which excited so much popular discontent last Winter.

Both papers, however, are free from the defects complained of, while they possess others for which the entire country has been clamorous. The Government has lacked a determined policy. It has assumed no fixed relation to the Slavery difficulty. And whatever may be the view taken of the expediency of the emancipation measure at the present moment, it certainly has the merit of placing the Administration in an intelligible and entirely definite position before the country, so that the standing charge of indecision ceases to be applicable. So with the proclamation touching arrests. Heretofore they have been made without regard to any fixed principle. Sentiments and acts which were in one locality indulged with perfect impunity, in another involved a prompt consignment to Fort Lafayette. And while the bench generally declined to interpose the habeas corpus to discharge the prisoner, judges were found always ready to issue that great prerogative writ. It is not, therefore, to introduce a new system of espionage and arrest, that the recent declaration is issued; but to restrain and define and mitigate the operation of a system which is already in active use. With the present rescript before the public, the requirements of the public service will be better comprehended; the good citizen will know how distant danger is from the path of straightforward loyalty; and the bad citizen will be warned of the limit to which his evil-doing and saying may safely proceed. So far as these remarkable documents thus tend to define an administrative policy, they are therefore important and valuable. But are there not other sinuosities of that policy which equally need straightening?

Grand Floral Promenade Concert.

With great pleasure we call the attention of a generous public to the fact that to-night, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, will be given a grand floral promenade concert in behalf of the widows and orphans of the dead soldiers of the army of the Union. The Brooklyn Horticultural Society, under the efficient management of the President, Mr. J. W. DEGRAW, and the Secretary, Mr. C. B. MILLER, deserves the credit of the affair. They have, during the past few days, presented to the public the most magnificent display of flowers and fruit ever seen in that or any other American City, and, as a fitting close of a prosperous season, they propose this grand donation, through the hands of the Woman's Association, to the distressed widows and orphans.

DODWORTH'S Band will furnish the music, and God's choicest flowers the fragrance. After the elder portion of the promenaders have retired, dancing will be in order for those trippingly inclined. We hope there will be a full house and a full treasury and full hearts, as the normal result of blessed charity.

The tickets are but fifty cents and can be bought at the door.

A Word for Capt. Hudson, of the Golden Gate.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper of yesterday, Sunday, Sept. 21, in a letter dated Manzanilla, Aug. 17, 1862, occurs the following:

"I returned last night from the wreck of the Golden Gate, having been absent four days. * * * For as there was nothing of disgust; but Capt. HUDSON, who went up with ten of his crew, some days ago for the same purpose, (to bury the dead,) came away without doing anything except to vomit up his 'tripes,' such was the effect produced upon him and his men."

Your correspondent, "A. M.," who, it appears from the heading, is Mr. A. MORRELL, United States Consul at Manzanilla, then goes on to state that he, with only five men, collected and buried, in eight hours, twenty-six bodies. Now, anyone who knows anything of Capt. WM. H. HUDSON, or of the gallant father who brought him up, Com. WILLIAM L. HUDSON, must know that he is incapable of shrinking from any duty. This very Capt. HUDSON whom Mr. MORRELL represents as so very dainty, in the same that stood, when a mere middy, at the masthead of one of our war-vessels, in the Alvarado River, with the bullets of the Mexicans singing around him while they tried to pick him off, as he coolly pointed out to the gunners below the batteries of the enemy, masked by the chapparel and other bushes on the bank. The man who has never hesitated at the danger of making a dead body of himself would not be apt to be so squeamish as Mr. MORRELL attempts to make out. There must be a mistake somewhere, as we shall no doubt hear in good time.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Sept. 22, 1862.

The Trial of Gen. McKinstry.

St. Louis, Thursday, Sept. 25.

The Court-Martial appointed for the trial of Gen. MCKINSTRY assembled this morning. In the absence of Gen. HASKELL, who has been ordered to Washington, and who left for the east this morning, Gen. S. B. GRAHAM was elected acting President. The charges and specifications were called for, but the gentlemen having them in charge could not at once be found. After discussion of preliminary matters, the Court adjourned to meet on Friday.

Michigan Republican State Convention.

Detroit, Wednesday, Sept. 24.

The Republican State Convention assembled in this city to-day, and nominated the present State officers for reelection, excepting the Lieutenant-Governor, Auditor and Attorney-General.

Parson BROWNLOW addressed the Convention.

The State Fair is being held, and promises to be more than usually successful. Parson BROWNLOW delivers the annual address to-morrow.

Indian Atrocities.

St. Paul, Wednesday, Sept. 24.

An arrival from St. Cloud reports more murders by the Sioux in the town of Richmond on Monday, and the killing of two children. The inhabitants are fleeing to St. Cloud, leaving the town to the ravages of the Indians.

A message from Fort Abercrombie received at St. Cloud on the 21st, reports the fort safe. The Indians have abandoned the siege.

Forty or fifty Chippewa chiefs have offered their services to Gov. RAMSEY to-night, to fight the Sioux, but they were not accepted for the present.

EXTRA BOUNTY.—It will be seen, by an advertisement on the fifth page, that the Greene-street Methodist Episcopal Church offers twenty dollars extra bounty for volunteers in the Ironsides Regiment.

BRADY'S PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE WAR.

The Horace Vernet of our great civil war is yet to appear, and as he is no doubt waiting upon the arrival of its Napoleon, we confess a serious anxiety for his advent. Nay, we may as well go further, and admit that we should be thankful, as things now stand, for smaller favors. We should gratefully accept a Pellissier, and commission an Yvon to record his achievements. But whenever the decisive man shall come, and with him the decisive hour, and the limner shall follow after to perpetuate for our children the "great deliverance" of the land in all its terrible beauty, the task of this latter will be greatly simplified to his cunning hand by the efforts which our leading photographic artist has made, and is making, to catch our armies "living as they rise," and, alas! to embalm our falling heroes ere they fall. From the outset of the war Mr. BRADY has been in the field. His cameras have followed the cannon from the Potomac to the York, from the Chesapeake to the Alleghanies. Scarce has the camp of the volunteer been pitched by the more or less muddy waters of the Chickahominy ere the patriotic Polyphemus plants himself within range, flings away his green curtain, and opens his one-eyed battery upon the scene. Like the sunlight which he presses into his service and ours, this silent Asmodeus penetrates into every secret, unveils every mystery. He captures the fugitive contraband as he urges his slow oxen through the splash of the Rappahannock fords, and sends him down through all-coming time to reveal the insensibility of the negro race to the compromises of the Constitution, and to the beneficent influences of patriarchal order. Just glance at the group! Not a white face among them—no Caucasian serpent seducing these wanderers from their Eden-home. They have equipped themselves—spoiling their masters, perchance, as the Egyptians were spoiled by their fugitive slaves of old—they have confiscated sundry rebel horses and wagons in advance of the acts of Congress, and they are making their way slowly northward—Yankeeward—freedomward. What instinct leads them do you think, and is there no "lesson for young statesmen" in this rude exodus without a Moses—unless, indeed, we assume with the popular chorus that the spirit of JOHN BROWN is "marching on" before these simple Israelites in ebony!

And as we are all of us, or should consider ourselves to be the youngest possible statesmen in the presence of the new and tremendous complications of our national position, what lessons may we not find in all these scenes! Look upon this picture—or upon this! A simple Virginian farm-house, with its low walls, its high and sloping roof. Under the tall, gaunt trees, which shade its rustic doorway, (for porch it has none,) stands a table, and around the table is gathered a group of country people—the natural Arcadians of the soil. There is nothing in the scene to suggest the throes of war—nothing to arrest the fancy or the eye. Turn to the title and what do you read: "Battle-field of Cedar Mountain. House in which Gen. CHARLES WINDER was killed." Over this common-place corner of the Old Dominion then, as over historic Yorktown, and Williamsburgh, and Richmond, the red light of battle has fallen. Never again shall the new glow depart from the scene.

Cedar Mountain is no more the Cedar Mountain that yesterday it was. How strange, how impalpable, and yet how real is this signet which history sets upon nature! The place where a great event has come to pass—the scene of a martyrdom—the birth-place of genius—the battle-fields of nations—are looked upon by us all with another than the outward eye. The veriest clown who turns the sod at Marathan or Waterloo is vaguely transfigured by the atmosphere about him, though the past be all a blank to him, and the present a mere question of more or fewer turnips.

In the case of our American battle-fields, the debt we owe to the art which seizes their main features before decay, or (more formidable still,) improvement's "effacing fingers" have begun to sweep their lineaments, is peculiarly heavy. So frail is our domestic architecture, and so uncertain the tenure of the picturesque even in the most deserted and lonely regions of the land, that five years might well suffice to obliterate all the leading accidental characteristics of any one of the scenes which our children will care to revisit, and desire to see, in imagination at least, as their fighting fathers saw them. Let us, then, heartily acknowledge our obligations to such an "abstract and brief chronicle of the times" as this which Mr. BRADY has been so earnestly and unobtrusively making up for us.

Scarce has the smoke cleared away from a well-fought field before his light artillery is brought into play. Here he fixes for us a deserted battery of the rebels with the ruins of its exploded gun, a subject now of curiosity and not of concern to the victorious National soldiers who stand about the wreck. Here he preserves the grim tremendous outlines of one of McCLELLAN'S consummate batteries, ditched, and bespeed and charged with thunder for the benefit of JOHNSTON and his Confederate thousands at Yorktown. Can you not pardon a little entrenching to the engineer who entrenches so well as this?

And here again, behold the point to which our fears and hopes have latest turned. Yes, this is Harper's Ferry—with all its glories of river and of mountain—with that grand curve of the broad yet fretful Potomac—and those haughty steeps of the Blue Ridge that will scarce stoop to give the royal river way—but withdraw in a kind of scornful acquiescence on either side as he advances. How rapidly at a glance you take in the difficulties of the position as well as its advantages, and learn to feel a wiser sympathy with the brave soldier who has just yielded up among these mountains, his life with his post. And that soldier himself—he also is here—a strong, weather-beaten veteran—standing like a pillar of stone among the pillars of stone which surround him—grey and firm. The sentinel of the Potomac—he died upon guard. Let this be his sufficient epitaph.

Once more let us repeat it—Mr. BRADY is rendering us all a real service, in divers ways, by this work of his, undertaken so courageously, and carried forward so resolutely. It is no holiday business this taking the likeness of "grim-visaged war"—and it is no mere gratification of idle curiosity which its results may afford us. We wish the artist all possible success in his task, and commend his efforts anew to the admiration and the appreciation of the American public.

The Fight at Washington, N. C.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I would hesitate to occupy your attention, but I have just seen in your paper and the Herald, pretendedly correct statements of the recent affair at Washington, N. C.

According to the one in the TIMES, the navy gunboat Louisiana "rendered efficient service in shelling the rebels from a strong position;" by the Herald's, we learn that the Louisiana opened fire by order of Col. PORTER, and it is patronizingly added that she "did very well, indeed, and helped us materially."

But none of these accounts, Sir, give the Louisiana the credit that belongs to her—of having effectually beaten the rebels out of the place that they had fully penetrated, and of having shelled them for a long way on their retreat. That the Louisiana alone, saved the town of Washington, N. C. from recapture, and all our land forces there from death or imprisonment, seems to have been studiously ignored.

I rely upon your sense of justice in this case, to render unto Cæsar that which is due him.

U. S. N.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Sept. 25.

COMPLAINT OF THE VOLUNTEER SURGEONS.

Great complaint is made in regard to the conduct of many of the volunteer Surgeons, who recklessly amputate the limbs of the wounded, and leave them destitute of the care needed for their recovery. The object seems to be to secure practice for operating Surgeons. Many operations are performed without judgment, and in a totally unjustifiable manner, frequently hastening the death of the patient. The Surgeon-General intends to issue an order prohibiting amputation at the hip-joint on the battle-field—such operations invariably proving fatal, and being mostly abandoned by English and French Surgeons, as well as the best American.

THE VICINITY OF THE BATTLE-FIELD.

The country for miles around the battle-field of Antietam is one vast hospital, every barn, stable and other building being filled with the wounded. The presence of Surgeon-General HAMMOND on the field of battle undoubtedly effected immense good, saving a large amount of life and preventing much suffering.

The different hospitals of this city contain over 19,000 patients.

THE FATE OF COL. MILES.

It is now stated, on what seems good authority, that Col. MILES was shot by his own men after the capitulation, instead of being killed by a shell.

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF NEW-YORK.

The nomination of Gen. WADSWORTH for Governor of New-York, is received with great satisfaction by the unconditional Union men here.

GEN. PRINCE.

Gen. PRINCE, and other officers, recently captured from the late army of Maj.-Gen. POPE, have been released by the rebel Government and will arrive at Annapolis this evening.

POSTAGE STAMPS.

The Post-Office Department has received information from various sources that certain persons persistently divert postage stamps from their legitimate purpose by circulating them in packages, together with canceled stamps, as currency. Owing to this use of the stamps, the Department is embarrassed in the supply for mail purposes. The public, therefore, are interested in discountenancing their circulation as currency.

In all cases of infraction of the law coming to the knowledge of the Post-office Department, the parties will be prosecuted, as it is a grave offence.

This, of course, has no connection with the specially designated stamp currency.

MORE LATE NEWS FROM RICHMOND.

Four Maryland refugees from Richmond arrivep here yesterday, having left the latter place on Friday last. All of them are mechanics, and have been living in Richmond since the commencement of the rebellion.

They effected their escape from the rebel capital by procuring passes on the railroad from Richmond to Hanover Court-house, from which place they reached the Potomac by private conveyance, striking that stream at a point a short distance below Aquia Creek, where they were taken on board the gunboat Teaser, which brought them here.

They say that since the invasion of Maryland by the rebels, and the coolness with which they were received, Marylanders residing in Richmond are treated with contempt and scorn, the anticipation having been that the rebel army would be received as deliverers and friends, instead of being treated as enemies and aliens. The greatest disappointment existed throughout the entire South at the reception met with by LEE and JACKSON in Maryland.

The military authorities are forcing all Marylanders into the army. The privilege of leaving the State is not even offered.

The Merrimac No. 2 is pronounced a humbug, and these refugees believe that from the first it has only been intended as a "scare." Our informants do not think the rebel Government ever had any intention of using the "machine" for any other purpose than a floating battery for the protection of the city. Its depth of water alone would prevent it getting down the river. It is plated with railroad iron, and pierced for 10 guns—four on each side, and one forward and one aft.

The greatest anxiety prevailed to hear from the army in Maryland, and fears were entertained, in consequence of the silence of the Government on the subject, that reverses had been sustained. All concur that the project of invading the Free States was a most desperate undertaking, but such is the confidence of the people in the military abilities of their commanders, (and especially JACKSON, who is regarded as the ablest soldier in the South,) that they see nothing but success in the future.

THE ASHBY'S GAP EXPEDITION.

On his return from the late expedition to Ashby's Gap, Col. PAICE paroled about 150 rebel wounded found at Middletown and Aldie, sent there from the Maryland battle-field with some thousand others—all very anxious to be paroled; but being under orders to return immediately, our force could not remain sufficiently long to do this. A wounded National Captain, belonging to the Twenty-second New-York, was found among them and brought to this city.

Every house on the road was a telegraph office; thus, in three hours after our force left, it was known in Aldie—40 miles distant—that artillery and cavalry were advancing, the rebels signaling with flags by day and lights by night, and hence the train of wagons had been removed before our force got there. All the prisoners expressed great anxiety for the speedy close of the war. One of the rebel wounded, who was in a dying condition, (a Captain in the Ninth Louisiana Regiment,) was the son of Mr. THOMAS CUMMINGS, of the Philadelphia Custom-house, who directed a letter to his mother. He was in Alexandria when the war broke out.

Col. PRICE is the commander of the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry, a regiment which has done good service in the war; and a squadron of which, under Lieut.-Col. BRINTON, made the brilliant reconnoissance described in the TIMES of last Saturday, and which resulted in the capture of a portion of the rebel Gen. EWELL'S body guard.

THE TROUBLE AT ALEXANDRIA.

The reports of trouble at Alexandria, between soldiers and negroes, arose from the conduct of some members of the Sixteenth Virginia Regiment, which is largely composed of deserters from the rebel army. As soon as the facts were ascertained, Gen. BANKS gave orders that the regiment should be transferred to some other place, and the troubles ceased.

CONDITION OF COL. BERDAN.

Surgeon-CLYMER, whose duty it is to examine and report on wounded and sick officers, reports Col. BERDAN, of the Sharpshooters, as "now under medical treatment in this city for hemoptysis, consequent upon a contusion received on the 30th ultimo in the line of his duty," and further, "that this most valuable officer cannot rejoin, at present, his command, without risk to his life, and is wholly unfit for any duty." The Colonel remained on duty after he was wounded, which greatly increased his present hemorrhage. Dr. CLYMER attends this case in person and Col. BERDAN, therefore, has the best medical advice and attendance.

THE HOSPITALS.

While there have been some complaints as to the treatment of soldiers in the hospitals here, and which was at once sought to be remedied by the Surgeon-General, the sanitary arrangements are in general excellent, and the attentions bestowed upon the sick and wounded of a character of the greatest possible good.

DIED IN HOSPITAL.

Corp. M. FLOWER, Co. C, One Hundred and First New-York Vols., died to-day at the Douglas Hospital; residence, Hastings, N. Y. Sergt. G. J. WALDRON, Co. F, Seventeenth New-York Regiment, died to-day at the Finley Hospital.

AN AMBULANCE CORPS.

Gen. McCLELLAN has organized an ambulance corps for each division of the army, under command of a Captain, with a First Lieutenant for each division, a Second Lieutenant for each Brigade, and a Sergeant for each regiment, to have control of all ambulances and transport carts.

NOTABILITIES IN THE CITY.

Gov. EDWARD STANLY, of North Carolina; Hon. C. C. CHAFFEE, Gen. G. NEGLEE, and Ex-Gov. A. W. RANDALL, of Wisconsin, are in the city.

GOV. STANLY.

Gov. STANLY having transacted his official business will immediately return to North Carolina. It is understood that the relations between himself and the Government are entirely harmonious.

GEN. MILROY.

Brig.-Gen. MILROY has been assigned to a command in Western Virginia.

About 4,000 men altogether, wounded in the Maryland battles, have arrived here and gone into hospitals.

MINERAL WEALTH OF THE TERRITORIES.

Some months ago, the Commissioner of the General Land Office addressed circulars to various land offices, making inquiries as to the mineral wealth of their several sections of country, and requesting them to forward specimens. The responses show a greater extent and richness of gold and silver than has heretofore been even imagined, including Washington and Nevada Territories, and the Southern or Colorado region of California, the last named embracing between six and seven millions acres of land. In speaking of the mines of Gold Hill and Virginia City, (sixteen or eighteen miles from Carson City,) the Secretary of the Territory of Nevada, says that the quartz there found contains both gold and silver in large quantities—the two metals being rarely found elsewhere in such abundance. Besides the facts regarding the astonishing mineral wealth of those regions, the replies afford much valuable information as to the vegetable productions and the natural resources generally for sustaining large populations.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

Information has been received from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, stating that the difficulties with the Chippewas in Minnesota have been adjusted, but he is fearful the troubles with the Sioux in the same State have only just commenced, and that they will be of long continuance.

LETTERS FOR THE NAVY.

Letters addressed to persons on board any vessel in the navy should be directed to the care of the Navy Department, whence they will be forwarded by the first mail to the squadron to which the vessel is attached; otherwise the letter, after remaining in the office where mailed for the time prescribed by law, is forwarded to the dead-letter office, and from there is sent to the Navy Department, thus causing great delay before it can reach the person addressed. Postmasters receiving letters directed to any naval vessel, without the post-office of the squadron added, should forward them immediately to the Navy Department, which, of course, is always advised of the station of each vessel.

A BLOCKADE-RUNNER CAPTURED.

Rear-Admiral DUPONT reports to the Navy Department, under date of the 18th, that on the 9th instant the U.S. bark Braziliero, Acting Master M.V. GILLESPIE, commanding, captured the schooner Defiance, of Nassau, in Sabelo Sound, while attempting to run the blockade. Her cargo consisted of salt, kerosene oil, cascarilla bark, &c. She also had in her cargo about 96 boxes, containing cases of gin, which was placed in the spirit room of the Braziliero. The crew of the Defiance will be sent North on the first opportunity. They are all said to be citizens of the rebel States, and engaged in the business of running the blockade. The captured vessel has been sent North in charge of Acting-master COOK, of the Braziliero, with a prize crew.

TROUBLE IN THE RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

An adjourned meeting of the Union Relief Association was held Wednesday evening. A lengthy report on hospital abuses was read and adopted, after which the meeting broke up in confusion. One of the members declared that he would pay liberally to keep the proceedings of the meeting out of the papers. It is most unfortunate that personal and professional jealousies should be allowed to destroy the influence of an enterprise so capable of conferring benefits on our wounded soldiers.

NAVAL ORDERS.

Lieut. A. N. MITCHELL has been ordered to the steamer Pocahontas.

Acting Assistant Paymaster JOHN G. L. STRONG, has been ordered to the mortar flotilla at Washington.

Acting Assistant Paymaster MERRITT has been ordered to the mortar flotilla at Baltimore.

Lieut.-Commander PIERCE CROSBY has been detached from the command of the Penola and ordered to return home.

Lieut.-Commander WM. O. WEST has been detached from the receiving ship at New-York, and ordered to the temporary command of the R. R. Cuyler, and upon his arrival in the Western Gulf blockading squadron, to take command of the steamer Hatteras.

Acting Second Assistant Engineer M. KENSIL, attached to the Potomska, has been dismissed.

Acting Third Assistant Engineer BADGLEY, has been detached from the Philadelphia, and ordered to the Eastern Gulf blockading squadron.

BOUNTY.

Widows and other heirs of deceased soldiers who are entitled to the $100 bounty granted by the act of July 22d, 1862, should know that in order to obtain it, they must make a written application for it to Hon. E. B. FRENCH, Second Auditor of the Treasury.

THE NEW-YORK BANKS.

A Committee from the different banks of New-York City are here, for the purpose of consulting with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in relation to the liabilities of those institutions under the several sections of the tax law.

THE GOVERNORS.

Many of the Governors who met at Altoona are expected here to-morrow.

SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENCES OF WASHINGTON,
WASHINGTON, Sept. 25, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 4.—On and after the 28th inst. the guards at the bridges and ferries of the Potomac will be instructed to allow no wine or spirituous liquor to cross without a pass from the Provost Marshal of Washington to cover the stores. The Provost Marshal will grant such passes only on satisfactory evidence that the articles are for hospital stores, or the private property of an officer. All wines or liquors attempted to be taken across the bridges or ferries without such a pass, will be seized and turned over to the hospitals. By command of Maj.-Gen. BANKS.

RICHARD B. IRWIN, Captain A. D. C. Acting Assist. ant Adjutant-General.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided, upon inquiry, that a person whose occupation is that of a retail dealer, may, under his license, sell by the piece or original package to a customer; but if he sells by the piece or original package to those who sell again, he is liable as a wholesale dealer.

INTERNAL REVENUE STAMPS.

Orders are rapidly coming in for Internal Revenue Stamps. Each order is regularly recorded and served in its turn. Orders for Proprietary stamps, and stamps for bank checks, are being filled without delay. Stamps for other purposes will be ready for distribution next week.

THE STORAGE OF COAL OIL.

The following regulations have been made in regard to bonded warehouses for the storage of coal oil: The owner or owners of any coal-oil distillery may erect, at his or their own expense, a warehouse of materials to be approved by the Collector of the District. Said warehouse, when approved by the Collector, is hereby declared a Bonded Warehouse of the United States, and shall be used only for storing coal oil, and to be under the custody of the Collector or his Deputy, and the duty on the oil stored in such warehouses shall be paid when and as it is sold or removed from such warehouse for sale.

RECOGNIZED.

The President has recognized LEOPOLD SCHMIDT, as Vice-Consul of Saxony, at New-York, and C. F. ADAE, as Consul of the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, at Cincinnati.

BLANKETS FOR THE WOUNDED.

Two thousand blankets were sent to Frederick, today, for hospital uses.

ACCIDENT.—WM. MCMANUS, aged 3 years, son of PETER MCMANUS, residing at No. 3 Hamilton-avenue, Wednesday evening accidentally fell from the third story window to the sidewalk, and was seriously injured.

The Episcopal Convention.

THE COMMITTEES ELECTED—INTERESTING DISCUSSION ON THE PROPOSED DIVISION OF THE DIOCESE.

A report of the morning proceedings of this body will be found on our second page. At the evening session the election of the following Committees were proceeded with:

STANDING COMMITTEE.

Clergy—Rev. Wm. Berrian, D. D.; Rev. John McVicar, D. D.; Rev. Samuel R. Johnson, D. D.; Rev. Wm. E. Eigenbrodt, D. D.

Laity—Hon. Murray Hoffman, Hon. Gulian C. Verplanck, Floyd Smith, Esq., Stephen P. Nash, Esq.

MISSIONARY COMMITTEE.

Clergy—Rev. Wm. Creighton, D. D.; Rev. Samuel R. Johnson, D. D.; Rev. Wm. F. Morgan, D. D.; Rev. Isaac H. Tuttle, D. D.; Rev. Wm. Payne, D. D.

Laity—C. N. S. Rowland, Esq.; Cyrus Curtiss, Esq.; Stephen Cambreleng, Esq.; George C. Collins, Esq.; Edmund F. Young.

Rev. JOHN L. TUCKER, D. D., of Troy, on behalf of the majority of the Committee of Thirteen, appointed to report as to the supply of Episcopal services, and the proposed division of the Diocese, made a report adverse to the division of the Diocese at this time, and recommending the consignment of the whole subject to the control of the General Convention of the Church.

Rev. THOMAS M. PETERS, of St. Michael's Church, New-York, presented the minority report, which was replete with arguments, facts and statistics, to show that the Diocese is already too large, and entirely beyond the ability of any Bishop properly to superintend. The enumeration of the duties expected of the Bishop, and of the various Boards and Committees of which he is an ex-officio member, elicited a general laugh from the Convention, so utterly absurd was the idea that one man could perform such services. The Committee insisted that the Bishop should be made more an actual than a nominal head of the Church. To remedy these evils, the Committee proposed the division of this Diocese into five Convocations, the least of which would be larger than three-fifths of the Dioceses of the country, and larger than nineteen existing Dioceses. The Committee recommend that each of the District s named should take steps to erect itself into a separate Diocese, and that the General Convention be requested to consider the plan of the establishmen of Provincial Synods, so that the present Convention might be resolved into a Provincial Convention, in order to preserve the power of the Diocese in controlling State legislation.

The minority report was signed by Rev. THOMAS M PETERS and Rev. WM. PAYNE, D. D., and was in accordance with the views of Dr. HAWKS.

The majority report was signed by Rev. S. H. Tyng, D. D., Rev. E. Y. Higbee, D. D., Rev. John I. Tucker, D. D., Henry E. Pierrpont, Hon. Hamilton Fish, Wm. A. Davies, Esq., Orlando Meads, Esq., and Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, M. D., and was in accordance with the views of Rev. JOSEPH H. COIT.

Mr. PETERS read for the information of the Convention a series of resolutions drawn with a view to prepare the way for the division of the Diocese into the convocations named, and the plan of Provincial Synods alluded to.

Hon. MURRAY HOFFMAN, a member of the Committee, offered a series of resolutions to the effect that the Bishop could not perform the duties assigned him; that the time has arrived for a division of the Diocese, and that a Committee of five clergymen and four laymen be appointed, to divide the Diocese into three or more Dioceses and to report at a future Convention.

The question being on the report presented by Dr. TUCKER, Mr. PETERS proposed his plan as an amendment, and Mr. HOFFMAN proposed his as an amendment to the amendment.

A discussion on the propriety of deciding the question in the absence of the Bishop was participated in by Dr. HIGBEE, Hon. MURRAY HOFFMAN and Dr. STEPHEN H. TYNG.

The Chair decided that the amendments of Messrs. PETERS and HOFFMAN were out of order as destructive of the original resolution.

Dr. VINTON appealed from the decision of the Chair, but subsequently withdrew it.

Dr. TAYLOR and Mr. S. B. RUGGLES opposed the decision of this question in the absence of the Bishop. The latter gentleman moved to postpone the consideration to the next Convention, calling attention to the fact that the consent of the Bishop was required to any division of the Diocese. Dr. VINTON thought it would be better to discuss the matter in the Bishop's absence than in his presence, because the Diocese could then act independently. Dr. TYNG, Dr. VINTON and Mr. RUGGLES further discussed the question. After an ineffectual attempt to procure an adjournment, the question was ordered, on the motion of Mr. RUGGLES, to postpone the consideration of the question until the next Diocesan Convention. On motion of Dr. TYNG, however, the Convention adjourned until Friday morning without taking the question.

MEDICAL.

ABSORBED, RESTORED; IGNORANCE EXPOSED; FALSEHOODS UNMASKED!

HERE IS PORTANT FOR BOTH SEXES! Married or single, at home or abroad, should read the MARVELOUS DISCLOSURES in the Science of Life, or Self-Preservation, now ready, a new and revised edition, published by the Peabody Medical Institute of Boston, as a gift or reward for the unfortunate and unhappy victims of private vice and solitary habits. Indeed, this book is worth its weight in gold to every young man who has injured himself by the pernicious practices too frequently indulged in at school, the effects of which are often felt even after marriage, rendering that happy state a source of misery instead of felicity. Also, the humane consideration of the many evils and diseases which are the consequence of ignorance, and which destroy the constitution, blast the prospects, and render miserable the lives of thousands who fall victims to their own folly, or the deceptive practices of designing pretenders, who, for the sake of filthy lucre, will resort to any means to accomplish their ends. Those who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted with any of the secret diseases which are the penalty attached to the violation of the laws of nature, should not delay a moment, but avail themselves of the only means ever offered to the afflicted, whereby a perfect restoration to health, in every case, is warranted. Those who have committed an error in judgment, by contracting marriage with some one afflicted with disease, should lose no time in perusing this truly valuable work, as it will point out the only means whereby a perfect restoration to health may be obtained. Parties who have been unfortunate in the treatment of their diseases by the use of Mercury, Nitrate of Silver, Sarsaparilla, Iodide of Potash, or Copaiba, will find in this book a treatise which will prove of the utmost importance to them, as it points out the only means whereby they can be restored to perfect health, without the use of any of the above-named poisonous drugs. Single copies will be sent to any address, free of postage, on receipt of one dollar. Address PEABODY MEDICAL INSTITUTE, No. 31 Bulfinch-st., Boston, Mass. Dr. GEO. H. PEABODY, Physician in charge. Consultation free, personally or by letter. Patients can be treated at home. Medicines sent to all parts of the country, secure from observation. Office hours from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. Sundays, 10 A. M. to 1 P. M. Entrance on Bulfinch-st. 1y

OPENING DAY.

Annual Exhibition of Fall and Winter Fashions.

The Dress Goods, Millinery, Cloaks, Trimmings, Lingerie and Laces to be Worn this Season.

GREAT CALL FOR RICH GOODS.

New-York is emerging from its Summer chrysalis as bright and beautiful a butterfly as ever. The war, which it was supposed would paralyze all its energies and reduce infinitely the demand for and consumption of luxuries of all kinds, seems rather to have operated in a contrary direction, and by placing wealth in different hands from those which formerly held it, given an impulse to trade which is as unexpected as it is gratifying. Broadway and other principal thoroughfares begin to wear their wonted brilliant aspect—people are returning rapidly to town—sidewalks are thronged, stores are crowded—the important business of Fall shopping has commenced—the signal for the display of all those varied textures, and ingenious specimens of art and skill, which afford the best evidence of industrial resources, and act at the same time as traps for the unwary. The shopping community, however, never manifested a greater willingness to be caught. This season, above all others, shows no lack of the one thing needful. Whether it is that business is unusually prosperous, or money more than usually plentiful, or because investments are considered doubtful, and currency itself uncertain, most true it is that women never received so liberal a carte blanche, or encountered so little opposition to their suggestion that the family wardrobe needed replenishing. In fact, instances have been known, recently, where husbands have handed a fifty-dollar bill, unasked, to their astonished wives, with the recommendation to "pitch in"—a reckless mode of proceeding, unparalleled in domestic annals—and which has led, in several cases, to misgivings that an extra bottle with a friend had something to do with it, or possibly some remnant of hereditary insanity.

This fortuitous state of affairs, combined with glorious weather, assisted to make yesterday one of the most delightful of opening days to all concerned. The milliners received the best reward of their efforts, in the sale of an unusual number of bonnets, while the ladies were equally delighted at witnessing a display so much in advance of their anticipations.

THE OPENING.

Among the principal establishments which yesterday opened their doors to the public, was that of Mrs. CAPPS, No. 571; Mrs. SIMMONS, No. 637; Mme. DEMAREST, No. 473, and Mrs. A. A. BINNS, No. 555 Broadway, MATHILDE & Co., No. 1 Brevoort-place; Mrs. DAVIDSON, No. 125 Bleecker-street; Mme. RALLINGS, No. 318 Canal-street; M. L. HIGGINS, No. 126 Sixth-avenue; Mrs. J. W. DENBSEY, No. 186 Bowery, and Mrs. J. REID, No. 311 Fourth-street. The large and elegant display made by all these artistes showed little fear of a depression in business or any falling off in the feminine desire for the "latest style" in a bonnet.

The shape for the present season has not materially altered from the last. It is still straight at the sides, high in front, with narrow compressed crown and curtain. The size, however, is growing small by degrees, and promises to grow beautifully less, the genuine French bonnets making their appearance with greatly curtailed proportions. There is one marked feature about the French bonnets which adds much to their general effectiveness, and this is the simplicity and uniformity of the decoration. A mixture of different flowers, unless in a group or boquet, is never placed upon one bonnet, and the interior always corresponds with the exterior. More costly trimmings are used than are often employed upon American bonnets, but there are less of them, and every one is made to tell, instead of being huddled up in a miscellaneous collection such as we frequently see.

The display this season exhibits less of this fault than usual. The materials are generally rich and plain, in high colors and strong contrasts. Flowers are not much used in trimming, feathers and lace being more generally employed. Ribbon is only used for strings, and then it is always a wide, plain taffeta, with perhaps a colored edge; figured and fancy styles are neglected altogether. Fine straws, trimmed with velvet and plumes, are considered distingué for Fall wear, and are novel in style, and really beautiful in quality. For a more advanced season rich, corded silks, in all the new shades of colors, are associated with velvet, the combination producing the happiest results. A few examples will give a better idea, however, than the most extended generalizations.

A very elegant bonnet was made of Lyons velvet, in that lovely shade of blue known as "violet." A heavy fringe of white ostrich feathers, slightly tipped and shaded with violet, was thrown across the front, and extended down one side. A white lace barbe was laid in a flat fold upon the top, and crossed upon the centre of the curtain, which was of velvet laid in folds, while the sides were of rich blonde over white lace.

Another admired style was of thick corded silk, of the color known as "Vesuie." The extreme front and curtain were of black velvet, laid over black and white lace. A magnificent black plume was curled over the top, and swept in a rich feathery fringe on one side.

Exactly opposite to this was a black corded silk, with scarlet velvet front, laid in fluted folds on one side and plain on the other. Next to the folds, and nearly over the top of the bonnet, a short black plume was gracefully disposed, and below this, descending upon the velvet, a long, black lace barbe, fastened with a jet ornament, and hanging below the curtain, which was composed of scarlet velvet, with a thin centre of black and white lace.

A very stylish bonnet of grey "matalassie," or quilted silk, has a curtain of Marie Louisa blue velvet, with folds at the side, knotted into a sort of rosette, and surmounted with drab plumes, which curl over the front, on the inside. The ornaments of the bandeau are a flat bow of blue velvet, and clusters of red thorn berries laid in nests of black lace.

A very stylish hat of purple corded silk, had a side scarf of purple velvet laid in folds, which gradually widened toward the front, and also over the edge of the curtain, which was composed of rich white blonde, over white lace. White plumes were the only decoration, the interior being finished also with velvet and lace.

A very chaste and beautiful style exhibited by Mrs. CAPPS, particularly struck our fancy. It was composed of the new cuir-colored velvet, and was simply yet elegantly trimmed with a costly white lace scarf, which fell as a fauchon over the crown, and was simply tied under the chin. The same artiste displayed a bonnet of white velvet, ornamented with magnificent black plumes and black lace barbes which had a very striking effect.

We cannot forbear mentioning, also, a bonnet for the present month, of exceedingly fine white Belgian straw, bound on the edge, and curtained with velvet, in a lovely shade of blue. On the top of the bonnet, over the front were placed splendid large blue velvet leaves, and curled up on each side of these, a short white ostrich plume. The interior of these bonnets corresponded in every respect with the exterior.

It is a novel feature of the new styles, that transparent crowns, curtains, or fronts, partly or wholly, are introduced into all, even those composed of the heaviest fabrics, and impart a lightness and delicacy very unusual in Winter bonnets.

Fancy hats of black and white felt are universal for children's wear, tastefully trimmed with colored velvet and feathers. The brightest and most striking colors in velvet are used, the plumes being generally black or white, according to the color of the hat.

OUT-DOOR GARMENTS.

The most distinguished novelties in cloaks have not as yet been exposed to the vulgar gaze. The demand is principally for shawls—not a cheap kind, by any means, but superb Cashmeres, whose soft folds cover, the cost of a respectable farm. For two years past India shawls have hardly seen the light. In even the largest establishments economy was the rule, among even the wealthiest citizens; and magnificent specimens of Eastern art and skill, which formerly brought a thousand dollars, were offered for seven hundred, without obtaining a purchaser. This state of things is now quite changed. The highest prices are asked, and readily obtained; and we have it on the authority of one of the most respectable merchants, that more India shawls have been sold within six weeks than for two years before.

Shawls, in fact, for the transition season, seem to be decidedly in favor. Those who cannot afford the real Cashmere, content themselves with an imitation, striped in the richest colors, and as good as the genuine, for all useful intents and purposes.

Fine wool check shawls are among the most popular styles, and deservedly. It is very seldom that garments at a low price are found in such excellent taste.

The most elegant cloaks for the present season are made of fine ladies' cloth, with the "son tecke," or braided trimming. They are generally laid in plaits at the back, shaped over the shoulder and arm, but without sleeves, which are mostly confined to the sack, (or sauf en basque,) and paletot shapes. A favorite style is the "Cansail," which takes up gracefully upon the arm and is deep enough to reach the top of the flounces upon the dress. These are trimmed with a rich passmenterie, and ornaments of jet, or with a richly braided hand-made border.

A novel trimming for cloaks, and one which has a very good effect, consists of fine, broad, black woolen braid, laid in box plaits, and beaded with several rows of narrow braid, or the same put on in a simple pattern. The advantage of this trimming lies not only in the fact that it is inexpensive, but also that it retains its position and cannot be spoiled by any accident.

The gored circular is a very beautiful pattern, in either light or dark cloth. It is braided in a handsome pattern upon each seam, the pattern terminating in a point before it reaches the bottom of the cloak, and each point finished with a tassel.

Another very stylish circular is called the "Richelieu," and was exhibited at the establishment of Mme. DEMOREST. It is very full, and is caught up in folds upon the shoulder, and fastened with rosettes of lace and jet. It is pointed in front, and forms an exceedingly graceful sweep upon the skirt. It will undoubtedly become a general favorite.

A very fine, warm, and soft velvet plush is much used for the heavier cloaks for Winter wear. Velvet beaver will also be worn, the most expensive qualities of which are worth eight and nine dollars per yard.

The saut en basques are deeper, and make their appearance in very handsome and attractive styles, but they do not possess the interest of novelty, and therefore require no description. A pretty style for a girl was made of fine fawn-colored cloth, bound deeply with violet silk, stitched with four edges of white silk. The front was turned back en revers, and finished with gilt buttons of a large flat kind.

DRESS GOODS.

The display of style in the various departments, although comprising much that is costly and beautiful, exhibits as yet few real novelties. This may be accounted for in various ways, one of which is the little encouragement held out to foreign manufacturers during the past year to send new designs to this market. Another is the fact that the demand is less for novelties than for those standard luxuries whose value is scarcely impaired by time, and whose possession is almost as good as a pedigree—such, for instance, as India Cashmere shawls, diamonds and superb laces, which last acquire an added glory with every shade of yellow which time and the careful washing in weak coffee imparts to their original vulgar purity.

The third reason is, perhaps, the most potent of all—and that is, that Fashion is an exclusive as well as arbitrary goddess, and has a great dread of being mixed up with common people. The public, promiscuous opening of styles, to be examined and commented upon by Tom, Dick and Harry, is not to her taste, and she prefers to wait until the crowd is over before introducing to the favored few, specialties designed for their particular gratification.

Things new are not, however, always better than things old; and if there are few materials or designs that are decidedly novel, there are still plenty which are exceedingly attractive and well worthy of attention. The rich profusion and splendid variety which is scattered on every hand, is at least sufficient to bewilder the novice, and requires an experienced eye to discover that they have ever before seen the light lue, yellow, black and white.

"Who can afford to buy these rich silks?" is a very natural exclamation, on seeing spread out the recent importations of some of our largest dry goods houses. Robes at a hundred dollars each; magnificent moires, eight dollars per yard; rich corded and figured silks at four and five, and for what are called low-priced and medium qualities, fifteen to thirty shillings. Are we really prosecuting an expensive war? and is this the end of all the lectures and exhortations to economy which have been poured into the ears of the wives and daughters of the Republic? The fact is a lamentable one, but not to be denied, that, so far, these efforts have produced the smallest kind of results. The costliest fabrics sell with greater ease than ever before, and at prices higher than have ever yet been demanded.

Plain colors rule in dress, as in other goods, this season, figures only being admitted into pattern robes of an original and special design. Most of these are copies from styles sent to the London Exposition, and are valued more as specimens of art than as the guide and exponent of taste. The pattern sometimes consists of a vine border for the bottom of the skirts, and sometimes of clusters of a particular kind of flower or fruit, upon a rich, creamy surface; but though superb in appearance, and exceedingly well fitted for an exceptional toilette, we confess to a preference for the plain, stately moires, and thick corded silks, in the new and rare colors, which are too perfect in themselves for contact with others, and which fulfill all our ideas of sublimity in the colorist's art.

The Cinderella drab, a sort of white ashes shade, steel, fawn, and dust-color are all in vogue, but the mark of present distinction attaches to cuir, or leather-color, black, and a beautiful shade of red, softer and deeper than "Solferino," and higher and more striking than crimson. The flame tinted "vesuie" has been found too trying to the complexion to be worn by itself alone, and is therefore introduced in homeopathic doses with the fancy silks, a few of which, in very récherché designs, are provided for those who prefer them to the single colors. The most striking of these contains fine stripes of vesuie, wide apart, on a ground of black moire. Another has tiny red berries drooping from sprays of fine black and white foliage, upon a rich brown ground. This last is a very effective style, and lights up with wonderful brilliancy. In the black. The splendor is greatly enhanced in making up by trimming with vesuie velvet, laid in folds, broad round the bottom of the skirt, narrow for the waist and sleeves.

Among the medium styles of goods, plain Irish poplins hold as ever a very distinguished place. The heavy "épingleinès," or ottoman velours, in all the rich, dark shades of color, are also very much admired, and form the handsomest and most serviceable of walking-dresses.

A less expensive, and still more useful fabric, however, is found in what is called the "Aberdeen" linsey. It is a fine, stout, and very warm woolen material—a modern improvement on the old linsey-woolsey. It is imported in plaids, and also in plain colors, and is not in the least affected by atmospheric influences; knee-deep in slush would not impair its fortunate and happy temperament. Its width is a full yard, and its cost only eighty-eight cents, so that, considering its durability, it would make a very cheap dress.

Speaking of dress materials, the tolan plaids must not be forgotten—ladies of cultivated taste, ranking these among the choicest and most truly distingué of any articles imported for Winter walking-wear. The texture of the cloth is soft and warm, rather than fine, and the preference in pattern is given to the strict "clans," notwithstanding that other mixtures have had colors introduced, which sometimes give to them a more novel and striking appearance. The "Rob Roy," (red and black) is one of the most desirable, as is also the "Clan Alpine," a dark-blue, striped with a blueish-green and black, and checked with red. The "Royal Stuart" is beautiful, and very showy. Scarlet and green, with lines of dark-

Costly cashmere robes for morning wear, rank among Winter luxuries. The shawl border, instead of being printed in the woolen ground, is woven in black, crimson and gold-colored silk, adding greatly to the beauty of the general effect, but also increasing the price to what would be a respectable sum for a grand toilette.

MAKING UP—THE NEW JACKETS.

"Making up" dresses is trial enough to test any woman's patience. It is pleasant to see and examine new goods; it is still more pleasant to become the owner of new and coveted patterns and fabrics; but the pleasure of possession is gone, and all the glory dimmed, the moment the making up becomes the subject of consideration. In the first place, the cost is something fearful to people of moderate ideas and means; then there is the dread that something will not fit, or that the entire dress will be made up in an unbecoming manner—few dressmakers aspiring to become artists in their profession.

The principal novelty in the construction of dresses for ordinary wear is the fancy jacket, or vest, which is made in an almost infinite variety. They are worn with Garibaldi shirts of the same material as the dress, and are then made in the color as the trimming. A skirt and shirt of drab merino, for example, is trimmed with rows of scarlet woolen braid, five upon the skirt, two down the front of the shirt. The jacket in this case is made of scarlet cashmere, trimmed with plaid, cut buttons. The vest is sometimes cut precisely like that of a gentleman, and ornamented with coral, or flat gilt buttons. At other times a chemisette of black and white lace is worn in which case the jacket deepens, the spring descending slightly upon the hips.

High plain bodies are very much admired, trimmed to form a jacket. A narrow quilting of ribbon or velvet is rounded off from the front, and carried behind, where it terminates in a bow, and broad sash ends of the same material as the dress, edged with a quilting to match the trimming upon the body.

Fashion has recently adopted a simple rule in architecture, by making a border of nearly all ornamental decoration. Skirts are finished around the bottom only, with bands or a quilting, or a simple pattern in braidwork. This is very effective, but care must be taken to preserve the appearance of a border, and not let it up from the bottom, else a shortened bantam look is imparted to the wearer, which is anything but dignified and becoming. Skirts are worn very full and long behind, quite as much so as ever, but they are no longer laid in large box plaits. Instead of these, fine single folds are used, placed very thickly together.

Sleeves are puffed, and worn loose at the wrists. Some are in the leg of mutton style, but very few are flowing.

BALL COSTUMES.

Plain rich silks have taken the place, to some extent, of the thin materials which have been used for ball costumes during the Summer season. Some very beautiful styles, from the most distinguished modistes we present for the benefit of young lady readers.

Robe of rich Solferino silk, the skirt edged with a narrow box-plaiting of the silk, edged with black guipure lace. Above this border is a festooned flounce of black guipure, headed by a box quilling of white satin ribbon, edged on the upper side with narrow lace. Rosettes of ribbon, encircled with black lace, are placed in the hollow formed by the festoons. Low pointed body, ornamented with a scarf bertha, made of lace and ribbon to match the flounce upon the skirt. This bertha crosses in front, and finishes with wide bow and long ends behind, edged with narrow black lace.

Another very pretty costume was composed of rich white silk, ornamented upon the skirt with tulle puffings, alternating with bands of black guipure lace, beneath which mauve satin ribbon was run. The low straight body has bands of lace, alternating with puffings, across the front, to match the skirt. Sleeves short and full, divided into puffs, with short straps of guipure, beneath which ribbon is placed to match the waist and skirt.

A very elegant toilette was composed of purple velvet, the skirt very wide, very long behind, and looped high at the side over a quilted skirt of white satin. Square Raphael body and antique sleeves clasped on the shoulder with a diamond cluster, completed this magnificent dress.

Double skirts have been revived somewhat for evening wear. They are made very long and open at the side, tunic fashion. They are mostly worn in thin materials.

A charming ball dress is of white tarletan, trimmed with a flounce, headed with a wreath of pink brier-roses. A tunic skirt of lace reaches the top of the flounce, and is caught up on one side with a branch of roses. A lace scarf drapes the waist, and is knotted at the side under the arm. The garniture for the sleeves and body consists of roses in their leaves, to match the skirt.

Long, wide sashes are worn tied behind in a wide bow, and are very pretty for young girls. A more costly ornament for the waist consists of a lace scarf, which may be crossed upon the shoulder, or simply knotted around the waist. In either case, it is tied under the arm. Sashes to match the material and trimming of the dress are also fashionable, and often accompany morning as well as evening toilets.

The method of wearing the hair this season is novel and very stylish. The back hair forms a broad, smooth ring which descends upon the neck, while the front is raised in puffs or waves from the side of the face. Wreaths are still in favor for headdresses, but they are invariably composed of a particular kind of flower in a single color, clusters at the sides and over the forehead forming the only contrast.

A very beautiful and novel headdress is made of the leaves, bleached and varnished, which inclose maize or Indian corn. These leaves are twisted or braided together, and finished with clusters of moss-rose buds in their foliage.

Another beautiful style is composed of the red thornberry with green leaves, which form a branch descending upon the shoulder.

Simple yet beautiful headdresses are made of black velvet in the diadem shape, the raised front embroidered with clusters of flowers in jet.

The "Undine" is charming with a full dress of white tarletane, and consists of a full wreath of river grass, with a moss-rose placed high up on one side, and another low down on a line with the ear.

LACES AND LINGERIE.

These were never more numerous, or exhibited in more charming variety. The use of the sewing-machine has introduced an exquisite system of tucking, which is used to beautify children's clothing, and under-garments of every description, and is elegant and ornamental as the finest needlework.

Made-up lace goods, in simple and inexpensive styles, are very much in vogue, and give grace and delicacy to the most ordinary toilette. Tucked and puffed spencers, with the pretty peasant boddice, are among the most charming of recent importations; and not less so is the puffed "Modeste,"—a most becoming accompaniment to a young lady's low-necked dress.

A wide lace scarf is an elegant novelty in this department. It is worn with a full dress toilette, simply knotted round the waist, or clasped upon the shoulder, and tied under the arm. It is very costly, and very récherché.

In capes, the pelerine, crossed in front and carried behind, where the round ends are knotted together, is the fashionable style. They are universally worn by ladies abroad.

STEEL ORNAMENTS.

The novel and most striking feature in decorations of every description is the use which is made of steel. It not only composes all sorts of ornaments by itself, but is used in the manufacture of dress and cloak trimmings, and even beautifies and adorns our shoes. Steel jewelry ranks high among the most exquisite works of art, in the fine inlaid styles, which have superseded the old clumsy designs.

The latest use to which steel has been put is ornamenting shoes, which it accomplishes most artistically. Black silk slippers are embroidered on the front in clusters of steel flowers—a strap, fastened with a wrought-steel buckle, giving the finishing touch. Walking boots are also decorated with three tiny steel buckles, laid on small flat bows of black velvet. This is an idea for which we are indebted to the Empress EUGENIE.

THE PRESIDENT AND EMANCIPATION.

An Interview with a Delegation from Chicago.

On Sept. 7, a meeting was held in Chicago at which a delegation was appointed to present to Mr. LINCOLN a memorial from Christians of all denominations residing in that city in favor of National Emancipation. This Committee met Mr. LINCOLN in Washington on the 13th, and last Saturday evening reported the result of its action to a second meeting, convened in Bryan Hall, Chicago. The following is the document:

REMARKS OF THE CHAIRMAN.

The President received us courteously, and gave the fullest opportunity to discharge the duty assigned. He listened with fixed attention while the memorial was read by the Chairman of the Delegation, who added a few words to express the deep interest felt in the President by the religious community, as manifested in many prayers offered in his behalf from the day of his election to the present hour, and to explain the pressure of feeling that caused those prayers to be followed by a memorial expressive of their solemn convictions of national duty and necessity. He observed that in doing this the memorialists believe that they discharge their solemn obligations as Christian citizens, which is all they seek, having no desire to dictate to their Chief Magistrate, who has his own responsibility to God, the Nation and the world. The time of presenting the memorial might seem inauspicious in view of recent disasters, which make the authority of the Government in the Slave States less extensive than before. But the memorialists believe these disasters to be tokens of Divine pleasure, calling for new and advanced action by the President in behalf of the country—such as would indicate national repentence for the sin of oppression; and he must see that if success in our military affairs was supposed to render such action unnecessary, and defeat to make it unavailing, then duty becomes an idle word, and God's voice of remonstrance and warning an unmeaning utterance.

The delegation presented, at the same time, a memorial of similar import drawn in German and in English, and signed by a number of our German citizens, which was placed in their hands on leaving home.

REPLY OF THE PRESIDENT.

After a moment's silence the President answered, and as we waited upon him in a public capacity, as a delegation from a large body of the people, to learn his views on a grave political and moral subject, which is profoundly agitating the nation, we suppose the reply belongs as properly to those whom we represented as to ourselves. We give it, therefore, with some degree of fullness, accurately in substance, and often in the very words which fell from his lips. The President made his observations deliberately and with well-chosen language, speaking in an earnest and often solemn manner, as one impressed with the weight of the theme, yet at times making a characteristically shrewd remark with a pleasant air. He commenced by saying:

"The subject presented in the memorial is one upon which I have thought much for weeks past, and I may even say for months. I am approached with the most opposite opinions and advice, and that by religious men, who are equally certain that they represent the Divine will. I am sure that either the one or the other class is mistaken in that belief, and that, perhaps, in some respects, both. I hope it will not be irreverent for me to say that, if it is probable that God would reveal his will to others on a point so connected with my duty, it might be supposed he would reveal it directly to me. For, unless I am more deceived in myself than I often am, it is my earnest desire to know the will of Providence in this matter. And if I can learn what it is, I will do it! These are not, however, the days of miracles, and I suppose it will be granted that I am not to expect a direct revelation. I must study the plain, physical facts of the case, ascertain what is possible, and learn what appears to be wise and right.

The subject is difficult, and good men do not agree. For instance, the other day four gentlemen of standing and intelligence (naming one or two of the number) from New-York, called, as a delegation, on business connected with the war; but, before leaving, two of them earnestly beset me to proclaim general emancipation, upon which the other two at once attacked them! You know, also, that the last session of Congress had a decided majority of Anti-Slavery men, yet they could not unite on this policy. And the same is true of the religious people. Why, the rebel soldiers are praying with a great deal more earnestness, I fear, than our own troops, and expecting God to favor their side; for one of our soldier's, who had been taken prisoner, told Senator WILSON, a few days since, that he met with nothing so discouraging, as the evident sincerity of those he was among, in their prayers. But we will talk over the merits of the case.

What good would a proclamation of emancipation from me do, especially as we are now situated? I do not want to issue a document that the whole world will see must necessarily be inoperative, like the Pope's bull against the comet. Would my word free the slaves, when I cannot even enforce the Constitution in the rebel States? Is there a single Court, or Magistrate, or individual, that would be influenced by it there? And what reason is there to think it would have any greater effect upon the slaves than the late law of Congress, which I approved, and which offers protection and freedom to slaves of rebel masters, who come within our lines? Yet I cannot learn that that law has caused a single slave to come over to us. (The President could not have meant to deny the well-known fact, that the slaves have come to us in vast numbers wherever the way was open; but only that he could not trace the influence of that law.) And suppose they could be induced, by a proclamation of freedom from me, to throw themselves upon us, what should we do with them? How can we feed and care for such a multitude? Gen. BUTLER wrote me a few days since, that he was issuing more rations to the slaves who have rushed to him, than to all the white troops under his command. They eat, and that is all; though it is true Gen. BUTLER is feeding the whites also by the thousand, for it nearly amounts to a famine there.

If, now, the pressure of the war should call off our forces from New-Orleans to defend some other point, what is to prevent the masters from reducing the blacks to slavery again; for I am told that wherever the rebels take any blacks prisoners, free or slave, they immediately auction them off. They did so with those they took from a boat that was aground on the Tennessee River, a few days ago. And then I am very ungenerously attacked for it! For instance, when after the late battles at and near Bull Run, an expedition went out from Washington under a flag of truce to bury the dead and bring in the wounded, and the rebels seized the blacks who went along to help, and sent them into slavery. HORACE GREELEY said in his paper that the Government would probably do nothing about it. What could I do? [Here your delegation suggested that this was a gross outrage on a flag of truce, which covers and protects all over which it waves, and that whatever he could do if white men had been similarly detained, he could do in this case.]

Now, then, tell me, if you please, what possible result of good would follow the issuing of such a proclamation as you desire? Understand, I raise no objections against it, on legal or constitutional grounds; for, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, in time of war, I suppose I have a right to take any measure which may best subdue the enemy. Nor do I urge objections of a moral nature, in view of possible consequences of insurrection and massacre at the South. I view the matter as a practical war measure, to be decided upon according to the advantages or disadvantages it may offer to the suppression of the rebellion."

REJOINDER BY THE DELEGATION.

Thus invited, your delegation very willingly made reply to the following effect; it being understood that a portion of the remarks were intermingled by the way of conversation with those of the President just given.

We observed (taking up the President's ideas in order) that good men indeed differed in their opinions on this subject—nevertheless the truth was somewhere, and it was a matter of solemn moment for him to ascertain it; that we had not been so wanting in respect alike to ourselves and to him as to come a thousand miles to bring merely our opinion to be set over against the opinion of other parties; that the memorial contained facts, principles and argument, which appealed to the intelligence of the President, and to his faith in Divine Providence. That he could not deny that the Bible denounced oppression as one of the highest of crimes, and threatened Divine judgments against nations that practiced it; that our country had been exceedingly guilty in this respect, both at the North and South; that our just punishment has come by a slaveholders' rebellion; that the virus of secession is found wherever the virus of Slavery extends, and no further; so that there is the amplest reason for expecting to avert Divine judgments by putting away the sin, and for hoping to remedy the National troubles by striking at their cause.

We observed further, that we freely admitted the probability, and even the certainty, that God would reveal the path of duty to the President as well as to others, provided he sought to learn it in the appointed way; but, as according to his own remark, Providence wrought by means and not miraculously, it might be that God would use the suggestions and arguments of other minds to secure that result. We felt the deepest personal interest in the matter as of national concern, and would fain aid the thoughts of our President by communicating the convictions of the Christian community from which we came, with the ground upon which they were based.

That it was true he could not now enforce the Constitution at the South; but we could see in that fact no reason whatever for proclaiming emancipation, but rather the contrary. The two appealed to different classes; the latter would aid, and, in truth, was necessary to reestablish the former; and the two could be made to operate together, as fast as our armies fought their way southward; while we had yet to hear that he proposed to abandon the Constitution because of the present difficulty of enforcing it.

As to the inability of Congress to agree on this policy at the late session, it was quite possible, in view of subsequent events, there might be more unanimity at another meeting. The members have met their constituents and learned of marvelous conversions to the wisdom of emancipation, especially since late reverses have awakened thought as to the God in this matter. Many of the most opposite previous views were ripe for uniting in calling for this measure.

That to proclaim emancipation would secure the sympathy of Europe and the whole civilized world, which now saw no other reason for the strife than national pride and ambition—an unwillingness to abridge our domain and power. No other step would be so potent to prevent foreign intervention.

Furthermore, it would send a thrill through the entire North, firing every patriotic heart, giving the people a glorious principle for which to suffer and to fight, and assuring them that the work was to be so thoroughly done as to leave our country free forever from danger and disgrace in this quarter.

We added, that when the proclamation should become widely known (as the law of Congress has not been.) "It would withdraw the slaves from the rebels, leaving them without laborers, and giving us both laborers and soldiers. That the difficulty experienced by Gen. BURNSIDE and other Generals arose from the fact that half-way measures could never avail. It is the inherent vice of half-way measures that they create as many difficulties as they remove. It is folly merely to receive and feed the slaves. They should be welcomed and fed, and then, according to Paul's doctrine, that they who eat must work, be made to labor and to fight for their liberty and ours. With such a policy, the blacks would be no incumbrance, and their rations no waste. In this respect we should follow the ancient maxim, and learn of the enemy. What the rebels most fear is what we should be most prompt to do; and what they most fear is evident from the hot haste with which, on the first day of the present session of the rebel Congress, bills were introduced, threatening terrible vengeance if we used the blacks in the war.

THE PRESIDENT'S RESPONSE.

The President rejoined from time to time in about these terms: "I admit that Slavery is the root of the rebellion, or at least its sine qua non. The ambition of politicians may have instigated them to act, but they would have been impotent without Slavery as their instrument. I will also concede that emancipation would help us in Europe, and convince them that we are incited by something more than ambition. I grant further, that it would help somewhat at the North, though not so much, I fear, as you and those you represent imagine. Still, some additional strength would be added in that way to the war. And then unquestionably it would weaken the rebels by drawing off their laborers, which is of great importance; but I am not so sure we could do much with the blacks. If we were to arm them, I fear that in a few weeks the arms would be in the hands of the rebels; and indeed, thus far, we have not had arms enough to equip our white troops. I will mention another thing, though it meet only your scorn and contempt. There are 50,000 bayonets in the Union army from the border Slave States. It would be a serious matter if, in consequence of a proclamation such as you desire, they should go over to the rebels. I do not think they all would—not so many indeed as a year ago, or as six months ago—not so many to-day as yesterday. Every day increases their Union feeling. They are also getting their pride enlisted, and want to beat the rebels. Let me say one thing more: I think you should admit that we already have an important principle to rally and unite the people in the fact that constitutional government is at stake. This is a fundamental idea, going down about as deep as anything."

NEW ARGUMENTS FROM THE DELEGATION.

We answered that, being fresh from the people, we were naturally more hopeful than himself as to the necessity and probable effect of such a proclamation. The value of constitutional Government is indeed a grand idea for which to contend; but the people know that nothing else has put constitutional Government in danger but Slavery; that the toleration of that aristocratic and despotic element among our free institutions was the inconsistency that had nearly wrought our ruin and caused free Government to appear a failure before the world, and therefore the people demand emancipation to preserve and perpetuate constitutional Government. Our idea would thus be found to go deeper than his, and to be armed with corresponding power. ["Yes," interrupted Mr. LINCOLN, "that is the true ground of our difficulties."] That a proclamation of general emancipation, giving "Liberty and Union" as the national watchword, would rouse the people and rally them to his support beyond anything yet witnessed—appealing alike to conscience, sentiment and hope. He must remember, too, that present manifestations are no index of what would then take place. If the leader will but utter a trumpet-call, the Nation will respond with patriotic ardor. No one can tell the power of the right word from the right man, to develop the latent fire and enthusiasm of the masses. ["I know it," exclaimed Mr. LINCOLN.]

That good sense must of course be exercised in drilling, arming and using black, as well as white troops, to make them efficient; and that in a scarcity of arms it was at least worthy of inquiry whether it were not wise to place a portion of them in the hands of those nearest to the seat of the rebellion, and aole to strike the deadliest blow.

That in case of a proclamation of emancipation, we had no fear of serious injury from the desertion of Border State troops. The danger was greatly diminished, as the President had admitted. But let the desertions be what they might, the increased spirit of the North would replace them two to one. One State alone, if necessary, would compensate the loss, were the whole fifty thousand to join the enemy. The struggle has gone too far, and cost too much treasure and blood to allow of a partial settlement. Let the line be drawn at the same time between Freedom and Slavery, and between Loyalty and Treason. The sooner we know who are our enemies the better.

THE PRESIDENT'S FINAL REMARKS.

In bringing our interview to a close, after an hour of earnest and frank discussion, of which the foregoing is a specimen, Mr. LINCOLN remarked: "Do not misunderstand me, because I have mentioned these objections. They indicate the difficulties that have thus far prevented my action in some such way as you desire. I have not decided against a proclamation of liberty to the slaves, but hold the matter under advisement. And I can assure you, that the subject is ever in my mind, by day and night, more than any other. Whatever shall appear to be God's will, I will do. I trust that in the freedom with which I have canvassed your views, I have not in any respect injured your feelings."

We assured him that he had not, and expressed our hope that in honest endeavors to express and defend our convictions we had not been wanting in due respect for our Chief Magistrate. Bidding him farewell, we commended him to the gracious guidance of God, having faith that if the memorial and our added interview had thrown into the trembling scales but a single grain of truth that might in the preponderance of justice and humanity, our mission would not prove to be in vain.

WM. W. PATTON,
JOHN DEMPSTER.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sunday, Sept. 21, 1862.

Parson Brownlow to East Tennesseeans.

I desire to say to all Tennesseeans, and others, that Col. FELIX A. REEVE, late of East Tennessee, for the time being has his headquarters at the Gibson House, in Cincinnati, where he is engaged in making up a new regiment for the United States service in the region of Cumberland Gap, having his commission and authority from Washington. I know Col. REEVE well, and know him to be a man of excellent character and of sound morals, and of bravery equal to the occasion.

Dr. WM. HUNT, Ed. C. TAIGG and Mr. STRICKLAND, late of Tennessee, have joined this regiment, and others are coming in. I desire most respectfully to urge the hundreds of Tennesseeans, now dispersed through the Northwestern States, to go into this new regiment, and fight their way back to their homes, and help to speedily secure the redemption of the most oppressed and down-trodden portion of the South.

As an East Tennesseean, I feel mortified and humbled, to find hundreds of Tennesseeans dispersed through the country, seeking favors of the people of the loyal States, and expecting those people to fight the way open for their return, while they stand aloof, and decline to fight their own battles. Let us go into the service, and then call on the people of the loyal States to come and help us drive the foe from our homes, and restore our State to its former position in the Union. Beside this, the United States Government will feed, and clothe, and pay all such for their services. Come one, come all, and let us fill up this regiment at once, and by our works show that we are sincere in our faith.

My Postoffice, for the present, is Cincinnati, and I will give any one calling upon me for information, such as I possess.

W. G. BROWNLOW.

Great Generals are those who win battles. So think the people, and the people are generally right. Whatever might have been thought of MCCLELLAN before, all will now agree that he is a great general. The people have always considered KNOX a great hatter, and the people are right, for KNOX is a great hatter. He is continually gaining victories over his cotemporaries by producing the most fashionable and best hat. His fall style, just issued, has proved the greatest victory of all.
